Pigg, Priest To Face Trial

Demurrers to indictments against Willis Glen Pigg, 23, and Norman Andrew Priest, 21, were overruled this morning in circuit court and the two young men were ordered to stand trial on charges of contributing to the delinquency of minor girls.

Both entered pleas of not guilty. Circuit Judge David R. Vandenberg said he would set the trial dates later.

U. S. Baletine, attorney for the two youths, had demurred to their indictments, contending that the facts as stated in the indictments were not sufficient to constitute a crime.

Pigg and Priest are held in the county jail.

Police Seek Californians

City police are trying to locate two persons in Klamath Falls, both on request of California authorities. Arthur G. Boone, Sacramento coroner, is trying to find Vernal Stark, daughter of Garrett M. Stark who died April 9 at Sacramento. She was supposed to be working in a beauty shop here.

The other person sought is LARRY J. Martin, 32, a wounded war veteran who left home in Fresno February 29 and has not been heard from since. His wife wrote officers here that Martin often talked of coming to Klamath Falls and may be working in a lumber yard.

Police Probe Burglaries

Two burglaries and a third attempted break-in were being investigated today by state police and the sheriff's office.

Last night thieves got into the office of the Campbell Brothers Implement company of S. 6th and stole a quantity of tools and about $20 in cash. The office safe was battered and its combination dial was knocked off, although the prowlers were unable to get it open.

The office of the Enterprise Irrigation district, 1825 Madison, was entered but nothing of value taken. Officers believe the same prowlers pulled both burglaries.

A rock was thrown through a window at the Crater Lake restaurant, Fort Klamath, about 3 a. m. but the prowlers were frightened away before an entry could be made.

Nature Group Hears Smith

Dr. Warren D. Smith, emeritus head of the geology department of the University of Oregon, was guest speaker at the April meeting of the Nature Society of the Klamath Basin, held Thursday at Klamath Union high school.

Dr. Smith spoke on the significance of geological history as it affects the present water situation in the Pacific coast area.

History points out the speaker said, that the area now known as Eastern Oregon and Nevada was once a region of lush and fertile areas, but the uplift of the Cascades and the Sierras shut off the moist winds of the ocean, turning this eastern country into an area of low rainfall.

The recent influx of settlement in the valleys of California has created a serious water situation there, the speaker said.

The vast number of wells have seriously lowered the water table in these areas drawing on water stored away countless years ago. Annual rainfall is insufficient for present needs, let alone for future expansion, Dr. Smith added.

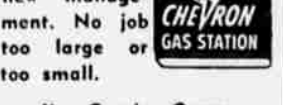

Suggestions for getting water to these areas have been widely discussed and range from distillation of sea water to bringing water from the Columbia river to California, he concluded.

Nature Study In Growing Field Of Education In Klamath Falls Schools

By FRED A. WHEELER and LILLIAS HYND Fairview School Staff

Through purposeful observing, collecting, experimenting, and reading Klamath Falls school children are led to explore the mysteries of nature. Throughout the grades emphasis is placed on experiencing, getting the child acquainted at first hand with the world about him. Controlled observations stimulate questions and further study which the teacher can direct.

In the accompanying picture, two very interested Fairview third graders, for example, watch some fascinating prisoners in the aquarium and at the same time learn from Mrs. Van Vactor's comments important facts about fish life.

Subjects for observation are unlimited. Recently in order to make the study of heavenly bodies more meaningful, one teacher conducted night field trips on which children were taught to name and locate major constellations and some of the brighter stars visible in winter. Some intermediate children who were recently studying minerals and rocks gained a better comprehension of kilns, uses of clay, and the importance of machinery for making brick when they took part in a conducted tour of the Klamath Brick and Tile company's plant. For the same children, also, top soil and sub soil became realities when they examined a deep cut through a hill where these were clearly discernible.

An entirely different but equally important type of observation in the science program is picture study. Through Mr. LaClair, the supervisor of visual education, teachers of a hobby for a child. Terrariums, potted plants, seed boxes, and window gardens, too, are useful for the study of plant life as well as for an ornament to the room. Various other experiments to show physical and chemical changes can be undertaken by children. Some fifth grade children studying food preservation have become enthusiastic about making tests with litmus paper, heat, and air to discover what food products contain acids.

Finally children in the schools have access to a series of excellent science reference books, encyclopedias, and textbooks from which they can gather information to supplement knowledge gained through observation and experiment.
