Go a Little Easier in Congress

By EARL WHITLOCK

It is considered quite smart and sophisticated, among numbers of people, to ridicule congress as a sort of vaudeville show filled with low comedians. And assuredly, there are, in his halls, a few clowns who are fully worthy of our contempt.

On the other hand, congress surely contains a remarkable percentage of honest, hard-working, brilliant patriots who could earn a good deal more in private life than they will ever earn as servants of the public, and whom we are extremely fortunate to have working for us.

Also, don't you think congress deserves a certain degree of respect merely for the fact that it is a directly elected body which represents us—you and me—in Washington. And it reflects, pretty accurately, all our shortcomings—as it should.

Any propaganda which is anti-congress—I don't mean sound and constructive criticism—I mean pointless ridicule and unjust condemnation, plays right spang into the hands of those anti-American forces in our midst who are trying constantly to discredit our entire form of government.

Let's start discounting such propaganda much more heavily than we do.

TOONERVILLE FOLKS DEMONSTRATION

Don't Go North, Young Man, Unless You're All Set With Employment

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP)—Don't go to Alaska looking for a fishing industry job, says the fish and wildlife service, unless:

A. You have a definite offer.

B. You have enough money to get home on if work is not available. It will also help, the agency cautions, if you have experience in that line.

A service publication, prepared by Paul Elliott of the commercial fisheries division, points out that most canneries do their hiring in March or April, usually in Seattle.

Workers hired at Seattle receive transportation and travel time pay at the cannery's expense. Most canneries provide monthly employees with room and board, and hire them from two to five months in the summer and early fall.

Wages vary from $191 to $376 a month for cannery and culinary workers, up to $317 to $578 a month for machinists, electricians and carpenters. The 48-hour week is customary.

"People experienced in fishing or in the work of the canneries are now much more readily available than they were during the war years," Elliott says. He adds that the cost of food and lodging in Alaska is from 25 to 30 per cent higher than in the United States.

In regard to fishing, as distinguished from cannery work, Elliott adds:

"In most cases hours are long, work hard, and income moderate.

"Very often the fishermen actually lose money when the fishing or marketing conditions are poor. Furthermore, seafickness is often a problem.

"The reluctance of the captain of individual fishing vessels to hire inexperienced personnel is not surprising. The crew must be a well integrated team if the fishing is to pay.

"Anyone entering the fishery for the first time must usually expect low earnings for the first two or three seasons."

Car Plunges Off Highway

The broken wires caused two trains to be held up here.

Miller received a skinned nose, but the car's two other occupants, William W. Miller of Aberdeen, brother of the driver, and Mrs. Lester Furlong of Seattle, were unhurt.
