Heart Disease Victims Using New Medicine

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Reporter
CHICAGO, April 15 (AP)—A new plastic powder promises many heart disease patients the boon of again eating foods with salt, two scientists reported today.

The powder is swallowed with water, like medicine. It then removes salt from food passing through the intestine. Dr. I. J. Greenblatt of Beth-el hospital, Brooklyn, and M. E. Gilwood of the Permutt company, New York, told the American Chemical society's national meeting.

Successful Use
It has been used successfully, they said, on some persons who otherwise could not eat salted foods. These patients had heart troubles marked by dropsy, excessive water in body tissues, and swelling of the joints. Salt aggravates this condition.

The plastic has been named permutt Z. Dr. Greenblatt got the idea for the method during the war when the same kind of principle was used in airplane and ship emergency kits to take salt out of seawater.

A substance in human blood which may be important in human cancer was described in another report by Dr. William H. Fishman of the University of Chicago's department of surgery.

In test-tube experiments, this chemical halted the action of an enzyme called glucuronidase. Enzymes are potent chemicals which help govern cell activities and growth. The glucuronidase enzyme has been found to be plentiful in most human cancer tissue. Dr. Fishman said. But little or none of the anti-enzyme detected in the blood has been found in cancers from human stomachs or intestines, he reported.
