Big Night At New Pine Tree

Today's Photographic History entry brings memory down to more recent times, showing a picture of a section of Main street in about 1922.

Modern-day residents will immediately recognize the Pine Tree theatre, which was brand new when this picture was taken near Seventh and Main streets. The Pine Tree was evidently having a terrific night, with a big line-up for a stock company show.

Adjoining the Pine Tree on the left in the picture is the building now occupied by The Gun Store and Western Union. Its lower floor in those days housed the jewelry establishment of Dr. J. H. Winters, and the Golden Glow restaurant.

Since those days, the Williams building and the National bank have filled the space shown at the extreme left of the picture.

The Pine Tree was built and operated by Hart brothers, who have since operated a chain of restaurants in the Sacramento area. It was started about 1922, and was later acquired by Rose and Harry Poole, who for some time had been operating the Liberty (later the Vox) which was located where the Emporium and Busy Bee restaurant are now.

The candidates' ball held in the Grange hall here last Saturday night, sponsored by the East Side grange, was one of the nicest dances from a social standpoint held here for some time. The music was good and everyone seemed to be more than ordinarily congenial. Part of this was engendered by the friendly and affable manner of the candidates themselves and partly because the crowd was in the mood for a good time. The grange building fund was swelled some $70 by the proceeds netted from the event.

There will be a regular meeting of the East Side grange this Saturday evening and the men folks will have charge of the program following. That program should be good! Then there will be a social hour and the usual potluck supper.

At a regular meeting of the YGA last Tuesday evening the group decided that instead of meeting every week they would meet every third Tuesday of each month. The club at present is campaigning for larger membership so that they can follow a more diversified line of constructive entertainment. With this in view, they are giving a big party this coming week the night of April 20, at which all young folks between the ages of 14 and 26 are cordially invited. Refreshments, games and dancing and an all around good time are promised for the occasion.

Word was received indirectly through Henry Tuxhorn that his brother-in-law Wellman Smith made a snow shoe trip to Lily lake last Sunday, endeavoring to reach the Moonlight mine and make an overnight stay. But due to a very light encrustation of the snow service, the going was too laborious to complete the mountain journey. Therefore Smith made it only to the lakes with his pack but reported five feet of snow at Lily lake.

Other evidences are a lot of sling shots coming into play, with a lot of our bluejays and robins losing their lives after they have trusted human supposed-to-be friends.

Seems a crime we feed them until they trust us only to be preyed upon by those that don't appreciate God's handwork.

PHILADELPHIA, April 17 (AP)—The stiff winds that swept Philadelphia last night gave Owl and Holmes protective agencies a busy night answering 37 burglar alarms. All but two were false, however, as gusts of wind set off the alarms by rattling loose windows.

UN Demands Truce For Holy Land

LAKE SUCCESS, April 17 (AP)—The United Nations security council today told the Jews and Arabs to stop fighting in Palestine, but there is no indication either faction will abide by the order.

The council laid down six specific truce directives to the two factions but at the last minute killed a provision to send a UN commission to the Holy Land to check on compliance.

The final vote came at 2:19 a. m. (EST) after five and a half hours of debate and paragraph-by-paragraph balloting. The emergency session started only a few hours after adjournment of the first meeting of a special general assembly session on the Palestine problem.

Veto Withheld

Russia refused to support the truce proposal but Andrei A. Gromyko withheld his big-power veto and abstained. The Soviet Ukraine joined Russia as usual. This made the final ballot 9 to 0.

Four provisions were passed unanimously. On two, Russia and the Ukraine abstained.

There was no assurance that either the Jewish agency for Palestine or the Arab higher committee, representatives of Palestine Jews and Arabs, would lay down their arms. Direct efforts to bring them together failed previously and the council drafted detailed truce terms in a move to get their acceptance and bring peace to the Holy Land.

Moshe Shertok, head of the agency's political department, told the council in the midst of the voting that the plan could not succeed unless the UN sent a commission to the scene.

British Power

As mandatory power in Palestine, the British have the responsibility for bringing the Arabs and Jews together. Both factions declined comment here. Indications were that the British would deal with the two groups on the spot. There is no direct enforcement provision in the truce terms.

Gromyko refused to support the plan because the council overrode his demands that Arab armed bands be ordered to leave Palestine. Only the Ukraine supported him. Russia also opposed a ban on political activity in the Holy Land.

The provision for a UN commission was beaten when delegates could not agree on the makeup of such a body.

The truce terms direct the Jews and Arabs to end all military activities, violence, terrorism and sabotage; refrain from bringing into Palestine armed bands and fighting personnel; stop importing weapons and war materials; and cease all political activity.

This ride will mark the beginning of the year's activities which will include other breakfast rides, trail rides, a barbecue, and possibly a horse show.
