Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

LAST night's "parade of quartets" by the barber shop singers organization at the Pelican theatre was terrific. A jammed house at one of Oregon's biggest theatres got the idea of what it was all about along in the middle of the first half, and from there on it was singers and crowd having a good time together.

EPLEY

Many a reader of this department didn't go — only 1700 could get in, and lots of people weren't wised up enough to try. My advice to those who missed is to go somehow next year—but it will be tough then, too, because everybody who went this year will want to be back.

Along in the evening it suddenly occured to me that the key to the attraction of the SPEBSQSA to all those men is that it is an organization without any high-sounding purpose. It has no axes to grind. It isn't trying to combat anything or sell anything. The idea is to have a lot of fun, which in some circles is not looked upon favorably, but which seems to me to be a first-class objective for at least one organization in a deadly serious world.

Candidates Please Note

CANDIDATES for county and district office are invited by The Herald and News to prepare campaign statements for publication in the paper before the May primary election. A "candidates column" has been started, and two of the multitude of sheriff's candidates have contributed to the column already. Others should be coming in immediately, if we are to publish statements from all candidates before the primary May 21, as we hope to do.

The statements of the men and women running for political office are recommended to the people of the area. Important offices are to be filled at the primary, and what the candidates say to recommend themselves deserves careful attention.

These statements are carried without cost and without obligation of any kind to the candidates, who, we hope, won't wait so long that it will be impossible to get them all in.

They Won't Build For Peacetime Use

PLANS are shaping up to make use of the Oregon Vocational school swimming pool this summer by townspeople as well as OVS students. The pool on the campus on the hill is one of the finest in the West, built by the U. S. navy at huge cost, and to Olympic competition specifications. It would be too bad to let it stand idle forever.

Unfortunately, the pool is several miles from the populated valley floor and its use by townspeople involves a transportation project.

This situation demonstrates the foolishness of some of the things that are done in wartime. When it was known that a pool was planned for the marine operation here, I asked Dr. Lowell Coggeshall, the senior medical officer and daddy of the Barracks, about the possibility of having the pool built down town. He was interested and made inquiries. He received a flat no—it had to be built on the reservation.

Yet had the pool been built in the populated community, and marines transported to it from the military installation, it would have been far more economical in the long run so far as the general public is concerned. It seems to be impossible to get the government to build things in wartime with an eye to their peacetime uses. Because they are thus constructed for an immediate purpose, enormous losses are incurred when that purpose need no longer be served.

If the navy hadn't had a hard and fast rule along that line, Klamath Falls could have been provided with one of the West's finest pools right here where it could be easily used.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Security Coverage

WHAT happens when the government breaks the law? A federal law is one passed by the congress and signed by the president. Occasionally a law may be valid when not signed or even when vetoed by the president. But a law is never valid unless passed by congress.

Some of the administrative agencies are permitted to issue regulations which are binding, but no regulation is valid which exceeds the powers delegated to that agency by the congress. It is true that during the worst days of the new deal, some administrative agencies went off on a rampage, acting as though they, and not the congress, were the center of legality in this country. Such agencies imperiled our form of government.

When the social security agencies decide for themselves who is entitled to coverage and include those who are not covered by payments, they are exceeding their authority. If a private insurance company did the same thing, its officers would rightly be given jail sentences for misappropriation of funds. Senator Millikin described this situation as "raiding trust funds." For both legally and morally the social security funds are the property of those who contribute to them. To pay out sums from these funds to those who do not contribute to them, seems to me to be stealing money. I don't know any other word for it.

• • • •

Economic Reality

H. J. RES. 296 has been introduced into congress to prevent the social security agencies from setting up categories of beneficiaries of social securities which could be projected to include everybody whether they contributed to the funds or not. This would include independent contractors like news vendors, grocers and such who could, by an extension of reason and administrative law, seek benefits without having contributed to these funds. The confusion arises from the fact that whereas congress passed the social security acts as insurance, the courts, in some decisions, notably in the Silk and Bartels cases, have legislated that these funds are, in fact, in the nature of welfare, the beneficial character overriding the insurance character. The supreme court, which is bound by the intent of congress, pursued in these cases its own intent.

The social security agencies thereupon sought to extend their authority, without benefit of congress, to include categories of individuals that the acts of congress excluded. This was achieved by the most curious reasoning that has yet come from the administrative intelligence.

Their basic assumption is that an employe is an individual who is dependent, as a matter of economic reality, upon the business to which he renders service. This is, of course, as true of the president of the United States Steel corporation as it is of his elevator boy who takes him to his office. In fact, Ben Fairless may be more dependent, for he could not get a comparable job. Six factors determine this "economic reality," according to the bureaucrats:

"(1) Degree of control over the individual.

"(2) Permanency of relation.

"(3) Integration of the individual's work in the business to which he renders service.

"(4) Skill required of the individual.

"(5) Investment by the individual in facilities for work.

"(6) Opportunities of the individual for profits or loss."

• • • •

Everybody Is Included

THEN the administrators say:

". . . The absence of mention of any factor, fact, or element in these regulations in this part should be given no significance, since the nation's economy is blanketed with many forms of service relationship, with infinite and subtle variations in terms, which render impracticable an analysis applicable to all situations."

Therefore, everybody is included. It is difficult to see how an independent business man, an independent contractor, a vendor on his own, exists at all. In a word, the social security agencies extend themselves from the cradle to the grave, and acting on their own theories, but supported by the courts, they pay out money that does not belong to them.

H. J. Res. 296 is being proposed in congress to stop this sort of thing. Meanwhile, congress has overridden the president's veto of H. R. 5052 designed to protect the news vendors as small business men. But what is really needed is a thorough investigation of the bureaucrat method of exceeding congressional acts, of extending their own authority and expending the people's money without adequate law.

The Gallup Poll

Majority OK Time Change, Farmers Against

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., April 24—The annual confusion over daylight saving and standard time is about to begin again as some sections of the country turn all clocks ahead this Sunday and other areas follow suit a week or so later.

In Washington last week the senate interstate and foreign commerce committee held hearings on two bills concerned with time. One would adopt summer daylight savings time throughout the country. The other would return the nation to an unchangeable standard for each of the four time in the country.

How do the nation's voters line up on these proposals? The American Institute of Public Opinion has just completed a new survey on this "Spring perennial tissue."

The results show:

1. If the question were put to the nation a majority of voters today would favor daylight saving time in the summer, about one in six voters would vote for year-around daylight saving time.

2. As in past years, it is the nation's farmers who overwhelmingly support the proposal to do away with daylight saving which still remains the delight of most city folks.

3. Most voters in areas which had daylight saving time last year want to keep it, while people in sections which had standard time through 1947 are just as strongly in favor of that way of running their clocks.

Reactions throughout the country were tested by this question:

"Which of the following would you prefer: (a) have standard time the whole year, including summer; (b) have daylight saving time in summer and standard time the rest of the year, or (c) have daylight saving time the year round?"

Here is how the nation voted:

S. T.	42%
D. S. T.	52
No opinion	6

The following table contrasts the views of farmers with those of voters in different sized communities:

	ST	DST	No opin.
Farmers	71%	24%	5%
Under 10,000	49	46	5
10,000-100,000	38	57	5
100,000-500,000	39	56	5
Over 500,000	24	69	7
People in areas having no D. S. T. last year	57%	37%	6%
People in areas having D. S. T. last year	28	68	4

Witnesses before the senate hearings, no matter which settlement of the time question they favored, joined hands in emphasizing the confusion caused by the present system under which some areas adopt daylight saving time and others do not.

The World Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

So let's talk about spies.

Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper published in Moscow, says imperialist powers (unnamed but obviously the major Western democracies headed by the United States) are sending two to three times as many spies into Russia as into any "bourgeois" state. The paper demands alertness throughout the Soviet armed forces to defeat imperialist espionage.

DeWitt Mackenzie

Well, I don't know the ratio of spies assigned to Russia as compared with "bourgeois" states, but it wouldn't be surprising if Red Star were right. Personally I should be greatly disturbed and shocked to learn that the democracies didn't have an army of spies in Russia and bolshevist satellite countries — just as the Soviet Union has in every other country on the face of the globe.

As a matter of fact in these dangerous days spies are swarming everywhere, like flies on the ceiling of a farm-house kitchen on a frosty morning. Naturally governments don't advertise their secret agents, but every major nation has them.

There doesn't have to be an "r" in the month to make spies in season, for they are with us always. Of course, when the dogs of war begin to bay at the moon, the spies start to scurry about. Consequently there is much more activity now in all countries because of the dangerous clash between the communist bloc and the democracies.

The employment of spies perhaps strikes the average person as unethical, but the custom is general. Most nations employ agents to try to ferret out the secrets of other countries, especially in times of stress. It's an unpleasant thing to contemplate—this spying of nations on one another. Still, when sabres are rattling like castanets it's a matter of national security for countries to know the strength and plans of their enemies.

The real sin is on the agent's own head—when he gets caught. He is the one who has to pay—frequently with his life. When an agent is caught he generally has to face the music alone, for his government obviously is almost never in position to acknowledge him and back him up. It's the code of the secret agent to take his punishment with sealed lips.

Hunting lions in the jungle is no more hazardous to life than the profession of secret agent. In time of war the firing squad and the executioner take their toll. In peace times the prisons get a lot. I encountered some ex-spies eating their hearts out on notorious Devil's island off the coast of French Guiana when I visited there a few years ago, and theirs was a terrible punishment.

I've encountered many other secret agents in one country or another. I knew one American agent abroad —a brilliant and charming woman. She got spotted while operating in a European country and all but lost her life. She escaped, but her usefulness was ended because her identity had been disclosed. She was a reserved, mild-manner little lady, as lovely and fragile as a primrose—a very decepting appearance, for she coupled cleverness with the fighting heart of a tigress.

Sure, there are secret agents busy the world over these days.

Purple Heart Award Learned

Notice that he has been awarded the Purple Heart was received Saturday by Robert J. Strader, 4816 Climax avenue, Klamath Falls.

Strader, who has been hearing rumors about men being called back to the service, opened the letter from the marine corps commandant with some trepidation, and was somewhat relieved when he recognized the purport of the message.

Strader was injured on Guam on July 23, 1944. He served four years in the marine corps. After being overseas 29 months, he came back to his home town when stationed at the Klamath Marine Barracks. He was in charge of the stables at the barracks. Strader is now with Whitlock's.

Concert Band In Top Spot

Klamath Union high school's concert band received a "One" or superior rating at the Southern Oregon district music contest under way this week-end at Southern Oregon college in Ashland.

The band appeared on the Friday program as did the orchestra which received a "Two," or excellent rating. The glee club and a cappella choir competes today.

Campaign Statements From Candidates At The May 21 Primary Election

By R. A. (Smiley) LaLonde
Democratic Candidate for Sheriff

Democratic voters of Klamath county:

I am asking your support in the primary election, May 21, for the nomination of sheriff. I was a member of Klamath Falls police department for seven years; have been with Modoc Pine company the past 10 years as a sawyer.

I am a taxpayer and veteran of World War I.

I opposed Lloyd Low for this office on two different occasions.

If nominated and elected it is my intention to conduct this office in the same efficient and courteous manner in which it has been conducted the past 25 years.

I think Lloyd Low has done well—let's say, "a darn good job." This will have to be admitted as no one could hold office that long if the voters thought differently.

In both of my past campaigns, I have sought this office on these same levels.

I am for the safety and protection of the county school children to and from their homes and school buses.

The Doctor Says—

Balance Needed In Diets

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

Many abnormally thin people find that it is much easier to know they should gain weight than to accomplish it. There are two ways to gain weight: 1.) cut down on the activity output, and 2.) increase the food intake and at the same time holding exercising down to what it was.

There are several ways of increasing the food intake. One of them is to choose foods with the highest calorie value. Starches or carbohydrates and fats supply more energy and have more effect on weight than proteins do.

MAINTAIN BALANCE

When trying to gain weight one should include fatter meat, more butter or margarine, cream, sweets, potatoes, bread and cereals. Balance must be maintained in the diet, however. It is not wise to cut out fruits, vegetables, meat, milk and eggs which supply ingredients necessary to maintain good health.

Another thing which can be done besides choosing the right diet is to eat more at each meal. The amount one eats is largely habit and can be changed. The stomach can be trained to hold more by gradually increasing the amount taken at each meal. One good way to do this is to eat until the appetite is satisfied and then always take a few more mouthfuls.

More food can be taken also just by eating extra meals. A small midmorning meal, an afternoon or bedtime snack of weight-gaining foods are helpful. A glass of half milk and half cream is a good example of what could be taken.

It cannot be emphasized too often that a balanced diet must be kept up. Almost anyone who does not have some serious disease can gain weight by following the plan of decreasing or at least not increasing activity and increasing the food eaten.

THE DOCTOR ANSWERS

QUESTION: What can be done for bronchitis?

ANSWER: The most important thing is to try to find the cause. Most common causes are infection, sinus trouble and allergy.
