Today's Roundup By MALCOLM EPLEY

TRAINS hammering their way up the grade through Klamath Falls told early risers this morning that the railroad strike deadline had passed without a walkout. It was a welcome noise.

What had happened was government seizure of the railroads followed by a federal court order, amounting to an injunction, against the scheduled strike.

The federal judge who issued the order restraining the brotherhoods from striking said that a strike would deprive the country of essential transportation, hamper commerce, obstruct the mails, imperil the national health and safety, frustrate the powers conferred on the government's executive branch by the constitution, and cause irreparable injury to the nation.

That's summing up the reasons there can be no full-scale railroad strike—that the disagreements between labor and management in this particular field have to be settled some other way. This emphasizes the absolute necessity for the fairest possible method of settlement of labor disputes on the railroads.

The strike is the time-honored "last resort" method of settling labor disputes in this country. Labor and management leaders alike have defended it. In theory, it probably cannot and should not be out-layed even in railroad disputes. But realistically, as experience has proved, a railroad strike has become a virtual impossibility.

counted... After that, I'll be for the winner of that election, Stassen or Dewey." Selection of a principal for Klamath high school is still hanging fire.

These Days By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

SOME tales are as old as the earth itself. The other night, wearied of the endlessness of the debate in UN and the primaries and Stassen and Eisenhower and all that, I pulled Demosthenes off the shelf and read of Henry Wallace.

You think it so necessary to grant general freedom of speech to everyone in Athens that you even allow aliens and slaves to share in the privilege, and many menials may be observed among you speaking their minds with more liberty than citizens enjoy in other states.

Then the ancient orator got on to the subject of the day, which was the evils of Stalin—I mean, Philip of Macedonia. Demosthenes put it this way: "If indeed Athens can remain at peace and if the choice rests with us... I personally feel that we are bound to do so; and if anyone says that we can, I call upon him to move a resolution and to do something and to play us no tricks; but if there is another person concerned, with sword in hand and a mighty force at his back, who imposes on you with the name of peace but himself indulges in acts of war, what is left but to defend ourselves? If you choose to follow his example and profess that you are at peace, I raise no objection. But if anyone mistakes for peace an arrangement which will enable Philip, when he has seized everything else, to march upon us, he has taken leave of his senses, and the peace that he talks of is one that you observe towards Philip, but not Philip towards you. That is the advantage which he is purchasing by all his expenditure of money—that he should be at war with you, but that you should not be at war with him.

Simple Mortals

If we are going to wait for him to acknowledge a state of war with us, we are indeed the simplest of mortals; for even if he marches straight against Attica and the Piraeus, he will not admit it.

Then the orator advises the Athenian assembly: "But it is not enough... even to oppose him with active military measures, but both from calculation and on principle you must show your hatred of those who speak publicly on his behalf; and you must reflect that it is impossible to defeat the enemies of our city until you have chastised those who within our very walls make themselves their servants. And that as all heaven is my witness, you will never be able to do; but you have reached such a height of folly or of madness or—I know not what to call it, for this fear too has often haunted me, that some demon is driving you to your doom, that from love of calumny or envy or rivalry, or whatever your motive may be, your clamour for a speech from these hirelings, some of whom would not even disclaim that title, and you derive amusement from their vituperations. This is serious enough, but there is worse to follow; for you have granted to these men more security for the pursuance of their policy than to your own defenders."

Have I quoted too lengthily? Well, my brethren, no one ever discussed this question more ably than did Demosthenes. And maybe he was a bore, as some of us have been since 1917, when we began cautioning the western world of the horrible specter of immorality that was blowing westward off the Eurasian steppes.

You can be as reasonable as you choose, but when a terrific campaign is organized to kill the motion picture, "The Iron Curtain," which every American must see and take his children to see, then we want to know what are the motives of the suppressors and boycotters. These creatures pretend that they oppose this movie because they hate war, but we have long learned to suspect those who say that they hate war only to prevent us from building our defenses. We know that they want us to be weak, so that our enemy might more readily build his power.

Garry Moore the low-down on the unique footwear. Appearing at a recent airing of "Breakfast in Hollywood." Stone emphasized the fact that he was trying to make the ladies of the country, and NOT the men, a little more happy by his shoes.

It seems that Stone got his idea from a customer some years ago who complained that his girl was taller, and had to shed her shoes before each dance. Neither of them liked the arrangement too well, so Stone fixed Shorpy up with corrective—but deceiving—footwear. But if the women are complainants, tell me one thing—why is it that the tallest women invariably wear high-heeled shoes?

The World Today By DEWITT MACKENZIE AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Washington's plain-spoken and at times bluntly worded bid for "decent and reasonable relationship" with Russia is a historic experiment which may at least produce some clarification of Moscow's intentions.

American Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith has told Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov that "as far as the United States is concerned, the door is always open for full discussion and the composing of our differences."

The Soviet government views favorably the desire of the government of the United States to improve relations... and agrees to the proposal to proceed with this end in view to discussion and settlement of differences existing between us.

Extreme Caution

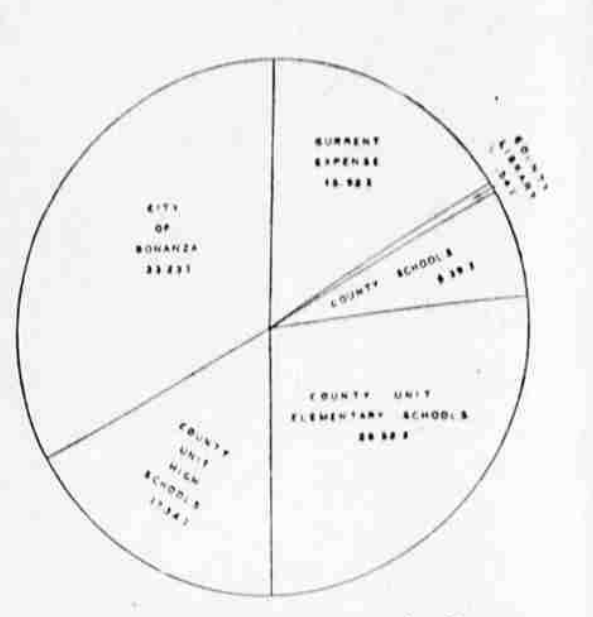

American diplomatic quarters are examining the Soviet reply with extreme caution. So does this columnist, and he invites readers to do the same. One is reminded of the truism that one is the cheapest commodity on the market and that its concrete actions which count.

All honest folk most certainly must wish for good results, but we should approach this test with realism. There is one basic fact which we cannot escape: All the differences between the United States and Russia stem from the Soviet's cardinal policy of world revolution for the spread of communism.

Chief Problem

This being so, the chief problem before any Russo-American conference must be that of the world revolution for the spread of communism. If Moscow will drop that, and raise its heavy hand from hot-spots like Korea and Greece and Italy, then amicable relations may be restored.

Where Does Your Bonanza Tax Dollar Go? CITY OF BONANZA'S TAX DOLLAR COMBINED LEVY 61.7

This diagram, drawn by the county assessor's office, shows how property tax money levied on Bonanza property is divided. Of each dollar, the town government of Bonanza gets 13.23 per cent; the county library .34 per cent, Klamath county gets 15.92 per cent and all the rest, just about half, goes to the schools. This pictured division is based on 1947-48 rate of taxation—61.7 mills for Bonanza—and assessments.

Candidates Column Campaign Statements From Candidates At The May 21 Primary Election

By ED GOWEN Republican Candidate for County Commissioner I was born in Klamath Falls in 1889 and have lived in Klamath county all my life with the exception of my war time service. My family were pioneers and my father, a pioneer sheriff of Klamath county, held many positions of public honor during his life time.

My family consists of a wife and one daughter. I own a home in Bonanza, in which we are living. I have lived in Klamath Falls, Merrill, Chiloquin, Port Klamath, Sprague River and Bonanza. During the many years I have gained an intimate and extensive knowledge of Klamath county and of the problems confronting the people of Klamath county as a whole.

I am an army veteran of World War I and served overseas in France for almost two years. I am well aware of veteran's problems and am a member of the American Legion.

As a young man I worked as a store clerk in Klamath Falls, Merrill and Chiloquin. Later I owned and managed my own general merchandise store in Sprague River. For 18 years I owned and operated a farm near Bonanza. I have gained an intimate and extensive knowledge of Klamath county and of the problems confronting the people of Klamath county as a whole.

If elected I shall devote my full time and service to give the people of Klamath county a progressive, honest, and efficient administration. I shall make a conscientious effort to...

Nunn-Bush Shoes New Spring Styles in Stetson Lee Water-Bloc HATS

Several large poplar trees and a house are being moved this week to make way for a new business building on S. 6th street. The property is owned by Earl DeWitt, building contractor, and is adjacent to the Bell Machinery company.

DeWitt, who last year built six new homes in that vicinity, will build a tile and brick one-story building 25 by 60 feet, with 25-foot frontage on S. 6th. It will be occupied when completed by a dry cleaning establishment. DeWitt plans to build in the entire corner as demand for other leases develop. The new building will be to be completed in 60 days.

The home now being occupied by DeWitt is being moved farther back from the street. With his family DeWitt came here from Missouri one year and a half ago.

Senior Play On Last Run Here Tonight

It's a wise woman who knows her own husband, as Adriana, played by Donna Rae Worden, discovers in Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors." KUHS senior class play which has its final showing tonight at 8 o'clock in the high school auditorium.

Over a thousand enthusiastic students rocked with laughter for an hour and a half yesterday during the matinee performance as countless embarrassing situations arose from the mistaken identities of a double set of twin brothers to confuse husbands, lovers, servants, brothers and wives.

Besides being highly entertained, students were delighted by the dramatic abilities of their two football stars, Leonard Heston and Harry Clawson who played the twin leads. One student laughingly remarked that "they are showing more action today than they ever showed on Modoc field." Roy Larsen and George Jones, romping through their roles as the twin calves, caused so much laughter that the action was delayed more than once.

An amusing incident developed in Monday's performance when George Jones, as Dromio, speeding down the ramp, sailed over the footlights into the laps of his adoring fans. Like the clowns in Shakespeare's day, he took full advantage of the accident and, by continuous horseplay, and in true Shakespearean style, kept his audience in galls of laughter for five minutes.

A prominent club member in the audience was heard to remark that the play was much more amusing than any of our modern comedies. Students in the Little Theatre wholeheartedly agreed that Shakespeare's comedy "beats them all."
