The Doctor Says—

High Blood Pressure Treated

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

High blood pressure, or hypertension, is not caused by a single disease. The most important problem is to decide if possible what is the particular cause in each individual case and what can be done about it. In many cases, unfortunately, the origin of the high blood pressure is not known or cannot be traced.

Even for such kinds of hypertension some recent developments in treatment offer promise for at least some patients. For example, some patients have been given a diet from which not only the sodium contained in salt is removed but most of the sodium in the other foods. Table salt, incidentally, is sodium chloride, but the sodium part can appear in other combinations.

The low sodium diet is rather complicated to prepare and probably is not too tasty, but good results in bringing about a drop in blood pressure have been reported. This treatment certainly will not answer the entire question of hypertension, but at least the use of "low salt, low sodium" diets in certain cases is interesting. The so-called rice diet is one of these low-sodium diets.

CUTTING NERVES HELPFUL
The use of tissue extracts is another promising line of attack. An operation called sympathectomy, in which certain nerves in the back near the spine are cut has also been used. After these nerves are severed the blood vessels expand and are able to carry more blood and the blood pressure is lowered. This form of treatment has now been in use for selected patients for a good many years and seems to be of real value. It is not suitable for all patients with hypertension.

Until such time as the cause or causes of hypertension are better understood and can be mastered at the source, these newer methods must be considered of value for selected patients only.

THE DOCTOR ANSWERS
QUESTION: What is neurasthenia?

ANSWER: Neurasthenia is a name given to a condition practically the same as nervous exhaustion. The cure depends on the seriousness of the case and what the causes are.

Poe Valley Man Dies

OLENE, May 20—Ernest G. (Jack) Holzouser, 39, member of a prominent Poe valley family, died following a long illness late Wednesday night at Klamath Valley hospital.

Mr. Holzouser underwent major surgery at St. Vincent's hospital in Portland two weeks ago, and Tuesday was returned to Klamath Falls and to Klamath valley.

His family has lived for many years in the Poe valley-Olene region. Mr. Holzouser was a welder and operated a blacksmith shop at Olene. The Earl Whitlock Funeral home is in charge of arrangements which will be announced later.

Surviving him are his wife, Dorothy, and a son, Glenn, of Olene; his mother, Mrs. Beattie Holzouser of Poe valley, four brothers, Henry, Irwin, Lorenzo and Louis, and two sisters, Mrs. Lucia Webber and Mrs. Freda Cornett, all of Poe valley.

and is there a cure?
