Chiloquin

School ended last week for another year. Although the students were at school only on Tuesday morning to receive their report cards, the teachers put in a full four days, finishing on Thursday. That evening the faculty of both grade and high schools, the custodians, and the cooks with their families had a picnic supper at the Old Swimming Hole, out from Fort Klamath.

The faculty is planning a busy summer. Mrs. Athel Roser and Mrs. D. L. Miller will attend summer school at Southern Oregon college. Mrs. Harry Whitting and her husband are planning a trip to Alaska. Margaret Molitor will spend the summer on the family ranch in North Dakota. Mrs. Charles Burton, after two weeks spent with her daughter and son-in-law on the family ranch north of Modoc Point, will spend a month or so visiting a sister in San Francisco.

Daylight saving time certainly confused a lot of local residents last week. Some families had set clocks up an hour one week too soon and spent the majority of one day trying to get time straightened out. But now everyone seems to agree on the hour.

The class of 1948 sponsored the last event of the school year when they gave the commencement dance a week ago Saturday.

The class of 1947 from Chiloquin high school made up an annual which they let out on contract. Through a series of unfortunate happenings it was well over a year later when the annuals were distributed. With the books came a large bill, expenses of printing that had accumulated during the year after the students had graduated.

On June 26, the class of '47 is sponsoring a dance at the high school gymnasium to try to pay that outstanding bill. The class has engaged the music of the locally popular orchestra from Klamath Falls, the Rhythm Makers. Plan to attend, have a good time, and help the cause.

They came north to attend the graduation from high school of their sister, Alice Marie Pohl. The Pohls drove a new car south when they left on Friday, taking with them Walter Pohl. The group visited the Ohles and McNabbs in Anderson, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Evans in Orville on the way to Sacramento.

Walter Pohl flew to Portland from Sacramento last Monday but because of flood conditions the plane was unable to land. The pilot circled the Vanport area before he headed for a landing at Salem. Mr. Pohl visited with his mother in Portland

'Gadget' Is Hospital Pet

DETROIT, June 8 (AP)—Curly-haired, brown-eyed little "Miss Gadget" was in virtual command of big Receiving hospital Monday.

This was true despite the fact she is only about two years old and small enough to walk under tables.

The only trouble was that mama was missing.

"Miss Gadget" got her name from a bewildered young taxicab driver in whose car the mother left her Saturday and never reappeared.

Charles Kaseta, 22, the driver, a single man, fell for the baby's charms and named her "Gadget" for a reason he couldn't quite explain—in turning her over to police.

Upon being brought to the hospital, "Gadget" immediately captured the hearts of nurses and doctors. She's that lovable, they said.

She chortles in her bed and follows the help around whenever permitted.

In her sleep, however, she cries "mama, mama."

Policewoman June Thomas called it "very unusual" since abandoned babies as a rule are reclaimed within two days.

Story with a catch -

A new customer drew me aside the other day.

"Look," he said, "I'm a graduate engineer—but the door on the glove compartment won't stay closed and the thing's got me stumped. My wife's torn a dress on it already."

I've fixed dozens of glove compartment doors. Usually it's the catch that needs resetting. All the job requires is a small screwdriver and a little know-how. This catch was no different from the others, and after I'd reset it, the door worked perfectly.

"You're a genius," the man said. "Now what can you do about all those squeaks?"

"In one word," I said. "Shelllubrication."

"Please," he said. "As soon as possible."

"Right," I told him. "Service is my business."
