Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

LIKE a number of other things about the trip, it's too bad Harry Truman's train stop here tomorrow night has turned out as it has.

EPLEY

The presidential train will get here at 11:50 p. m., DST., when all good Klamathites should be in bed on Friday nights. The president himself will probably be sleeping soundly against sleepless nights in mid-July. There'll be no scheduled political demonstration of any kind; none of the state's democratic big-wigs will be here.

Well, the presidential train does have to pass through nights as well as days, and Klamath happens to be on the dark side.

This writer well remembers Mr. Truman's previous visit to Klamath Falls. It was in the fall of 1944, when he was just a senator running for vice president, the second man on a ticket overshadowed very much by the first man.

The train made a stop of a half hour or so, and it was some time before it could be switched around so the candidate could make an appearance before the small crowd which was there that early morning. We were welcomed on the special car, and enjoyed a talk of 20 minutes or so with Mr. Truman.

It was a pleasant conversation, a highlight being a story told by Mr. Truman based on the fact that this interviewer was a republican and he a democrat. The story was about someone who had a hate on somebody else, and didn't want to become acquainted with the object of his wrath for fear he might like him.

Later, Mr. Truman got off the train, shook hands with friendly people gathered around, and bade farewell. There was no thought, at the moment, that he might be back four years hence as president of the United States.

Suit Postponement

THE Herald and News regrets that a news story which appeared in this paper was the basis of the postponement of a civil suit trial in circuit court. Our information from the judge is that an error in reporting the status of a criminal case involving the same defendant was the point raised by the defense, and he thought it best under the circumstances to postpone. The error was unintentional, and it will always be the policy of The Herald and News to avoid as far as possible prejudicing juries. In this case, we are sure that questioning the jurors would have proved that the story did not cause prejudice against the defendant, but we nevertheless regret the error and incident.

Briefs From The Pocket File

THE axe and the saw still swing and sing against the fine old early-day trees of Klamath Falls . . . Pine street, which used to be splattered with pleasant, mottled shade, is now austere and bare in the hard sunlight . . . We see the old trees go with a personal pang, and when at last, someone moves against those mighty poplars in front of Fremont school, we'll fight . . . There, ladies and gentlemen, is a pair of trees . . . We've gotten spiritual lift from just contemplating those great plumes against the sky and the brick front of the building . . . But we've learned that what gives some people inspiration gives others the itch for the axe.

Some of the alert wags around town are calling it Ostendorf time and Landry time, in deference to the disagreeing views of the mayor and council president on the issue of standard and daylight saving time . . . There's always something funny like that happening in our town . . . Klamath high's 1948 band finished its local appearances in a blaze of glory last night, and was off to the Portland Rose Festival this morning . . . Town and country folk who helped finance the band's trip can get satisfaction out of the knowledge that it will be a credit to Klamath Falls and the Klamath country in the festival music extravaganza.

Some of the democrats who registered republican to participate in the recent republican primaries are now getting back into the fold, as quietly as possible . . . And that reminds us that registration books are already open for the fall general election, and those who aren't on the lists can get there any time . . . You don't have to wait for that final rush.

Driving in California Wednesday afternoon we saw an unusual phenomena in the air. It was a bluish white twister appearing about the middle of the naval bombing range just five miles north of Macdoel, on the west side of the old power line road as we were driving north about 3:45 p. m.

A solid column appearing about 50 feet wide, it seemed to be being sucked up into the clouds between 1500 and 2000 feet altitude, the general estimate. It lasted about 15 minutes and parts of the rope-like image kept reappearing after the main "cable to the clouds" was dissembled.

The pinnacles in Sand Creek valley, Oregon, are the result of years of erosion.

The World Today

By RELMAN MORIN
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Scholarly Sir Oliver Franks, the new British ambassador, is hardly a man to be envied.

He takes up his duties in Washington at a time when the relations between Britain and this country are at a very low point, indeed. The over-all community of interest remains. So does much of the mutual admiration and genuine friendship between the two people that was engendered by close contact during the war.

But the British already are irritated, seriously, with our Palestine "policy." That is a fact. It exists now.

In the near future, American administrators are likely to be just as irritated with the British over events that develop from the actual operations of the Marshall plan.

Big Problem

So the new British envoy has one big, tough, hairy-chested problem on his desk today. And he probably will have an even bigger and tougher one confronting him tomorrow.

Let's examine them.

The first is easy to understand. Britain has been in the Middle East for well over a century. At the apex of her strength, she was the only great force in the Arab world. She maintained peace and order, sometimes at the expenditure of blood and treasure. She entered into treaty relationships with the Arab countries, and even with the smaller tribes.

Along with very considerable business and economic interests she acquired great prestige.

Last November Palestine partition became a fact. Immediately, blood began to flow. Something very much resembling a 180-degree turn in the American attitude then appeared. A Jewish state was proclaimed. Six minutes later, we recognized it, formally, as a state.

There is no turning back from that now.

Arab World Out

Britain ultimately must recognize the new state, too. When she does, her position vis-a-vis the Arab world may become practically impossible. The Arabs certainly will turn elsewhere, to some other major power, for help.

You will not need three guesses, or even two, to name that power.

That's the basis for British irritation with the United States.

Americans, in turn, are beginning to feel excessively annoyed over British economic operations. As Marshall plan money goes across the sea, that annoyance may develop into real friction.

For one thing, there is the "sterling bloc." How will British and American administrators decide between an "earned" dollar and a "free" dollar? The British are going to acquire dollars both by the sale of exported products, and through Marshall plan loans. Americans will demand some degree of supervision in the use of the latter.

Criticism also exists, in Washington, over the matter of trade between Western Europe and those countries within the Russian orbit.

Britain recently sold Russia steel railway tracking in exchange for grains for cattle fodder.

The American position is that nothing should go to Russia.

If It's The Woman Who Pays---Then Let Her Start

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—Money whispers love's sweet nothings today. Cupid has gone on the stock exchange. Matrimony is wearing a price tag.

Across the country grass widows and spinsters are springing up like dandelions to announce their willingness to race to the altar with the right man. But he doesn't have to be tall, dark and handsome. The first qualification of their atom age Romeo is a five-figure bank account.

HAL BOYLE

This new pattern in leap year courtships was set by a sprightly suburban blonde with one divorce and two children. She's had scores of offers since she began looking for a husband with $10,000. A brunette in Seattle went her one better by advertising for a husband with $10,000—plus a home.

And now the field is flooded with unwed damsels who've put themselves on the matrimonial mart for a prince charming with a charming credit rating.

But the old iron law of supply and demand has set in. Some girls have cut the asking price to $5000 and a wedding ring, and the under-the-counter figure is probably lower than that in many cases.

I hope all the girls get the man of their financial dreams. But if most of the lassies in America start refusing to dedicate their lives to a cookstove except on a cash-and-carry basis, they are bound to lose. The going rate on those endearing young charms will quickly drop to bargain basement levels.

Sad Statistics

It's a matter of cold, sad statistics. It boils down to these facts: Women control most of the nation's wealth; more women than men want to marry; but the male is vanishing. He can't stand the pace.

The 1940 census showed that in the marrying ages—15 to 39—there were only 27,139,179 males to 27,666,538 females. That left Cupid a surplus of 427,405 women matrimonially unmarketable in this monogamous land. The census also listed 822,563 divorced women but only 624,398 divorced men. And widows outnumbered widowers by a fancy 5,700,092 to 2,143,552.

How could the girls hold out for a gent with a fat pocketbook? There aren't that many around.

The average girl today no longer can enjoy the classic luxury of deciding whether she'd rather marry a young man with an apple in his hand, or plight her troth to an old man with a hundred acres of land. She lacks suitors in both brackets. She may have to get an apple or some land herself to attract a wandering male.

No Bargain

For women appear to be less of a matrimonial bargain than men. Here is the ungallant picture: A woman of 30 has only about an even chance of marrying; at 40 it's a four-to-one bet she won't; at 50 the odds against her are 16 to 1.

But the odds are 13-to-10 that the bachelor of thirty will marry. And the odds are only 3-to-1 against him at 40, and 10-to-1 at 50. It just seems like more people want to marry bachelors than are willing to wed, bed and board with spinsters.

The plain truth is, fellows, that good men are in short supply and getting scarcer all the time. It's the women who ought to be bidding for us. If it's the woman who pays, let her start paying. Anybody know a lonely widow who can cook—and has $50,000 to cook with?

My wife, Frances, just read this piece. She thinks my idea of women bidding for husbands is completely silly.

"Listen, my little child, bridegroom, she said, "if there is going to be any lonely widow with $50,000 around this house, I want it to be me."

Chinese Students Stage Demonstration

PEIPING, June 10 (AP) — Defying a police ban, several thousand striking students marched through Peiping Wednesday in an anti-American demonstration.

Three students were injured slightly in a scuffle with police.

Officers threw a cordon around the former legation quarter to prevent any possible march on the American consulate. Eyewitnesses said police beat back the demonstrators with their belts.

Students from Yenching, Peking and other universities joined in the latest outburst directed at U. S. economic help for Japan.

USAF To Buy 2201 Planes

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—The air force said today it will buy 2201 new planes as a step toward building up a 70-group force.

The money will come from the $1,345,165,000 which the defense department earmarked for the purpose from recent defense appropriations.

The program will include 243 bombers, of which 162 are heavy long-range types, and 1405 jet fighters.

The long-range B-50 type bombers will have conventional reciprocating engines. But the bomber program also will include 81 jet bombers, of which 30 will be the high-speed "flying wing" jet version.

Lakeside Airport Improvement OK'd

PORTLAND, June 10 (AP) — A $12,000 improvement of the Lakeside airport has been approved by the state board of aeronautics.

The field will be made a Class 2 port. Additional land will be purchased and a 3500 foot runway built. The field recently was deeded to the board by the forestry department.

Allocation of $1500 for clearing and grading of the Santiam junction airport runway also was voted. The statewide air marker program was given $500.

Cattle Price On Way Up In North

SPOKANE, June 10 (AP)—The price of cattle continued to rise on the Spokane livestock market yesterday.

Peak price was $32.50 a hundred pounds paid for seven Hereford steers consigned by Walter Schmidt of Rosalia. They were purchased by Swift and company. The steers averaged 877 pounds.

TIME BICKER

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore (To the Editor)—It amuses one greatly to find a two-column article in the bottom left hand corner of the front page of The Herald and News, June 8, regarding the two-hour session of the Klamath Falls council consumed by extensive bickering over a time change for the city of Klamath Falls.

It seems that with so many worthwhile things that our city fathers could find to do they could at least give us our five bucks worth at their council meetings. I believe that is what they receive per meeting.

To me it appears that the issue as to wether the mayor and city council should itself conform to a time schedule it has decreed for everybody else could be disposed of in at least three minutes. Then the council could spend its time constructively for the community, doing what it can to bring in new industries, considering our traffic problems, beautifying the city, and the 101 other worthwhile things that need the attention of the municipal authorities. BALDY EVANS.

Wallgren Mourns Schwellenbach

OLYMPIA, June 10 (AP)—Governor Wallgren termed the death of Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach today a loss to the state.

"He was an excellent judge on the bench, an excellent senator and a man very loyal to his friends," Wallgren said. "The state lost a good representative in the East and I lost a friend."

Lightning Starts Three Fires

A storm which raged over the area just south of the Klamath Indian reservation and northwest of Dairy late Wednesday afternoon started three small lightning fires.

The fires, within three miles of each other were spotted from Yainax butte and Hogback lookouts at 5:28, 5:44 and 5:50 p. m. They were reported immediately to Klamath Forest Protective association headquarters and fire crews were sent out this morning.

These spot lightning fires are not expected to amount to much.

Trio Sought After Beating Woman

NORTH BEND, June 10 (AP)—Police today are alerted along the coast for three thugs who beat up a young woman and then dumped her from an automobile after she refused them information.

Police Chief George Sorensen said the woman had refused to tell the trio where her employer hid valuable possessions. He said she was dragged into a car, beaten and then bound at the wrists and dumped from the car.

Names of the woman and her employer were not made public.
