Today's Roundup

MISSING from the local activities program this year is "Stop Forest Fires" day. The American Legion has sponsored this event here for many years, but this time, the annual campaign to make the public fire-conscious will be handled through the Keep Oregon Green organization, a state-wide effort with definite local applications.

Hal Ogile of the Klamath Forest Protective association reports that in the area under the jurisdiction of his association there have been 16 fires so far this season, all of them lightning-caused. The woods have not yet dried out sufficiently to cause a serious hazard, but with warm sun and summer winds, it won't be long now until the situation enters the dangerous stage.

About that time, people begin going into the woods in larger numbers. The Fourth of July weekend usually sees the first burst of trouble from man-caused fires. The next two weeks will bring the beginning of the critical situation that exists all summer and fall in our woods and range country.

It is hardly necessary to tell intelligent people what precautionary measures to take to prevent fire. They know that campfires must be fully extinguished, and burning materials, such as cigarette butts, must not be thrown from cars or dropped in open areas while hiking or horseback riding.

They know, also, that here in the Klamath country, the timber stands are limited, and that they are extremely valuable to the economic welfare of our region. As they mature, the trees of the Klamath country will be cut to provide labor for our people; they must not be permitted to be destroyed by fire. Preventing forest fires is more important than ever to us now.

School Voting
REPORTS indicate some confusion over the residential qualifications of voters participating in next Monday's high school election. In that balloting, there will be one contest, that between Mrs. Doris Peyton, incumbent, and John Schubert, and interest in the election seems to be somewhat greater than usual.

Any registered voter living in the Klamath Union high school district may vote in the high school election.

While the candidates must come from certain zones—Mrs. Peyton and Mr. Schubert live in the Altamont zone—the voting is general over the district. Mrs. B. C. Johnston, living in the western or Weyerhaeuser zone, is to be on the ballot without opposition, but in her case, also, the vote will come from the district as a whole.

The Klamath Union high school district covers the entire city of Klamath Falls and a big outside area, including the southeast suburbs, Weyerhaeuser area west, Pelican City and Lakeshore drive, and northward embracing Algoma.

A large vote in a school election here would be unusual, but certainly desirable. More people should take sufficient interest in school affairs to go to the polls at election time.

Night Desk Diary

By RED HURD
(Night of June 21, 1949).
Charlie McFarlan failed to get in to the spirit of the insomnia club the other night, and as a consequence, fell asleep at the mike. Yes, she was heard over the radio frequently late in her life.

Here's a little more on the woman described as the "greatest contralto of her time," although not included in her question.
She was married three times. During the World War she had sons fighting in both the German and American armies. One was killed on each side. She became an American citizen in 1905.

Just received a score on the Willows-Gems game. The homeowners dropped a 4 to 2 decision tonight.

Charlie got Steve Stone, a clever lad on piano boogie-woogie on the "Insomnia" program tonight and it didn't take Steve long to catch on. He barely finished the last note of Three Bears when the phone rang and a caller wanted him. They got more and loved it!

Incidentally, Steve came through for me on a question tonight. A caller, a young gal working on some sort of a contest, wanted to know who worked from the quarterback position in the T formation in the 1941 Rose Bowl game.

SIDE GLANCES

overemphasis on the importance of the executive official. This is what the card says:
"Your pal, Hickenlooper, doesn't seem to be doing very well in his smear attack on Lillenthal, does he? Tech! Tech!"
The writer apparently does not understand that one of the most important functions of congress is to investigate conditions in the United States with a view to perfecting legislation. As a matter of fact, every executive of government should be under constant scrutiny by congress, particularly when his office, including the presidency, comes up for appropriations. The founding fathers were extraordinarily wise and prescient when they placed the power of the purse in congress and the power of confirmation in the senate because they thus assured that executive officers of government would not be able to do secretly what the people would not have them do publicly. Also the senate was given the power of ratification of treaties, which they also may withhold, thus making it difficult, if not impossible, for the president to pursue his private ends or personal whims in foreign relations.

Evasion
SOMETIMES executive officials evade these protective provisions. For instance, Mr. Roosevelt entered into a series of agreements at Teheran and Yalta which were not in treaty form and therefore were never ratified by the senate. Concerning the Teheran agreements, he made the following untrue statements:

"Of course, we made some commitments. We most certainly committed ourselves to very specific military plans which require the use of all allied forces to bring about the defeat of our enemies at the earliest possible time."

"But there were no secret treaties or political or financial commitments."
Had he been required to put the Crimean (Yalta) arrangements in the form of a treaty, the Far Eastern terms, particularly those giving to Soviet Russia Japan's rights in Manchuria and possession of the Kurile islands, that treaty would never have been ratified by the senate.

In the matter of the atomic energy commission, the situation is even tighter. Congress, by the bill bringing this commission into existence, appointed a permanent watch-dog committee, to supervise the work of the commission. This committee of congress is entitled, by law, to all the data available to the commission and it is empowered at all times to scrutinize every act of the commission. The commissioners are required, by law, to tell the congressional committee the truth, by which is meant the whole truth.

The current investigation of Mr. Lillenthal's conduct of his office is then routine. It involves no smear of David Lillenthal but a check upon his conduct of office. If he chooses to regard that as a smear, if he chooses to use his publicity facilities to describe it, if he chooses to accept any scrutiny of his conduct as a personal indictment, that is a reflection on his character and not upon the congressional committee nor upon its statutory rights.

Liberty At Stake
IT is of the utmost importance that this be understood because our liberties depend upon keeping executive officials in check. Congress may sometimes hit out blindly in the course of an inquiry and hurt an innocent person. On balance, this evil has been trifling, except for the particular individual, compared with the great good done by congressional committees.

This 81st congress has proved itself to be an unusually competent and wise congress. It has studied legislation with meticulous care. It has restrained itself and executive officials with remarkable fortitude as compared with other congresses. It has resisted private and official lobbies beyond anything that might have been anticipated. The American political system is designed for slow action. Particular groups interested in particular measures seek speed, but those who wrote our constitution feared speed and established numerous impediments to unsound judgment and hasty action. Mr. Roosevelt managed to rush congress with "must" legislation. The constitution wisely makes no provision for that.

The World Today

DeWITT MACKENZIE AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

This amazing world of ours is changing so rapidly in its way of life that it's difficult for some of us old-timers to keep up with trends. It's no problem for the youngsters, since they never have known anything else, but their horse-and-buggy elders don't so easily readjust themselves to the ideological, social and political upheaval of the atomic age.

That's rather a pity, for we are in the midst of a global metamorphosis which exceeds anything since Adam. It's a transformation in which folk who fall out of line are likely to get stepped on.

You will, I trust, overlook this momentary outburst by your columnist. What inspired it was the marriage extraordinary of the German Princess Cecelia of Hohenzollern to Clyde Harris, a good-looking former American army officer from Amarillo, Tex.

The princess is, of course, the granddaughter of the late Kaiser Wilhelm (the all-highest) and is a direct descendant of England's immortal Queen Victoria. The wedding took place yesterday amidst the splendor of one of the Hohenzollern castles, with many notabilities, including royalty, present.

Imagine the kaiser's granddaughter marrying a commoner! When I was a young fellow in the hey-day of the all highest such a marriage would have been unthinkable, at least to the emperor and his court.

FOR SCHUBERT
KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—I will soon have completed one year of service as a director of Union High School District No. 2, and while I still have much to learn about the problems of a board of education, I have observed and learned enough to feel that John Schubert would be a valuable addition to the board of directors.

I have known him locally for over 35 years and have learned from discussions with him that, while he believes in rigid economy in the conduct of school business, he also believes in the maintenance of salary schedules which will attract and retain the highest caliber teachers and employes in the school system. It is my sincere and carefully considered opinion, for whatever it may be worth to you, that the best interests of Union High School District No. 2 will be better served by electing John Schubert as director.

THANK YOU
PORTLAND, Ore. (To the Editor) The department of Oregon Disabled American Veterans takes this opportunity to thank you and through you the merchants and citizens of Klamath Falls for the splendid cooperation and courtesies shown us during our 28th annual state convention held in your fair city, we deeply appreciate the friendliness and hospitality extended and trust that we may have the pleasure and privilege of again holding our state convention in your fair city in the not too distant future.

Sincerely yours,

KF Vacacioners In Accident
Word has been received here that Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Hovers, of 215 Alameda, have been delayed on their vacation trip through the Middle West by an accident in Ohio. The car sustained considerable damage and was sold. The Hovers purchased a new car to continue the trip. They are now in Illinois. Hovers is manager of the J. J. Newberry store here.

Korean Reds Nab Catholic Figures
VATICAN CITY, June 22 (AP)—Communists in Russian-occupied North Korea have arrested a Roman Catholic bishop and more than 40 other church personalities, an informed Vatican source said Tuesday.

Most of those arrested are now imprisoned at Wonsan, Korea, Vatican circles were quoted as saying. Among church figures said to have been arrested was Mgr. Bonifacio Sauer, titular bishop of Apollonia and apostolic administrator of the vicariate of Kanko.

Interest in the Insomnia club, KFLW's 10:15 nightly program, is growing by leaps and bounds and there are many give-aways enticing new listeners. Monday evening's record winner was Robert Vaughn, 3949 Shasta way.

There are some new angles to this program too, where it's possible to get a dinner for two at the Night Hawk cafe and a baby sitter to stay home with the kids, all on the same night.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Angina Pectoris Serious

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D. Written for NEA Service
Angina pectoris means literally pain in the chest. It is usually caused by a diseased condition of the arteries which supply blood to the heart muscle. These blood vessels are called the coronary arteries. The pain develops when not enough blood is passing through them to supply the needs of the heart muscle.

The hardened coronaries do allow some blood to pass through. Consequently the pain usually does not develop when the victim is resting or exercising only slightly; it comes on when the heart muscle is worked harder and needs greater quantities of blood.

A person who has angina pectoris has to learn how much exertion he or she can take without producing symptoms. In addition to the pain, these often include a feeling of anxiety, sweating, shortness of breath and sometimes other signs.

Life Expectancy
It was formerly thought that a person with angina pectoris could not live very long and could not avoid suffering great discomfort. But according to recent studies, the average life expectancy after the first sign of angina is about eight to 10 years, and some live for more than 25 years.

In addition to the improved outlook which has been uncovered, methods of improved management are being developed constantly, in which the amount and kind of exercise is more closely adapted to the patient.

Until research workers have discovered a means of preventing hardening of the arteries, angina pectoris will continue to occur. It is well to realize, however, that while this is a serious condition, it does not mean the end of all good things. Sensible adjustment to the new circumstances is necessary, of course, but frequently this can be accomplished with "rest cures."

Note: Dr. Jordan is unable to answer individual questions from readers. However, each day he will answer one of the most frequently asked questions in his column.

TODAY'S QUESTION
Q. What is the cause of squeaking of the knees when going up the stairs? I am 54 years old.
A. This is probably due to a mild degeneration of some of the tissues making up the knee joints.

Drunk Driving Sentence Given
Twenty-one-year-old Sam Kemp, recently released from the county jail after serving time for stealing coins from an Easter seal container in a local tavern, was given 83 days in lieu of $100 on a drunk driving charge in justice court Tuesday.

The young Pelican City machinist was picked up by state police Sunday night. He was also fined $5.50 for having no operator's license.
