

Fort Klamath, Wood River Residents Promote Tourist Attractions Of Big Area

By MYRTLE WIMER
 PORT KLAMATH, June 29—Business people of Fort Klamath and the Wood River valley are co-operating 100 per cent in sponsorship of a campaign advertising this area. A folder, just of file press, sets forth factual information, with a detailed map of local points of interest, both historical and scenic, and telling of the attractions for sportsmen, including fishing, hunting and winter sports data.

Soap Box Derby Set For Saturday

Soapbox derby plans for Saturday were completed by 20-30 club sponsors at the Tuesday night meeting with 1:30 p. m. set for the time of the race on Upham street. Soapbox vehicles made by children and entered in the competition will be towed by 20-30 members' cars through the Rodeo Kiddle parade Saturday and towed on up to Upham for the race afterward.

Keith Moon, head of the rodeo management this year, together with the rodeo queen and her court with their chaperones, were guests of the club at Tuesday's banquet. Chaperones were Mrs. M. W. Poole and Mrs. Dale Mattoon.

Plans for setting up a wishing well in front of J. C. Penney and company store, were completed. Donations to the "well" will be used for the rheumatic fever research fund. The well will be represented in the rodeo parade.

Installation of officers will be held at a party set for July 13 in the Log Cabin Inn.

Speaker for the evening was John McCulloch, former FBI man, who talked about confidence men.

Certification Acreage Asked

Applications for certification of seed potatoes in Klamath county now on file at the county agent's office, total 200 acres each of netted gems and white rose. Normally around 800 acres of each variety are entered for certification. Rules require that applications be on file by July 1.

First field inspections are usually made about the middle of July. General frost damage Wednesday morning will probably delay inspection to the latter part of July this season.

An article in the Potato World reports this year's potato acreage to be the smallest planted in 70 years of record.

and is getting ruggeder. And the parliamentary elections are still a year off. Unless the Labor government can pull a startling rabbit out of the hat, realities will be sterner a year hence than now. By then, there may be no British Santa Claus to shoot.

In that event, it wouldn't be a case of swapping horses in the middle of the stream because the stream would have dried up. The voters might then turn to the CONSERVATIVES as having something to offer, after all.

Curiosity Is Mainspring Of New Trap

PUEBLO, Colo., June 29 (AP)—If, reasoned Carl Fuller of Billings, Mont., curiosity will kill a cat, why shouldn't it be just as lethal for a mouse?

Proceeding on that theory, Fuller has constructed a super de luxe mousetrap which he has on display at the Rocky Mountain Inventors' congress now in progress here.

Here's how his mousetrap works: Mickey is lured into a maze of corridors, hidden trap doors, slyly placed snap-loops and other unsuspected impediments through his sheer desire to find out just what in heck the gadget is. As Mr. Mouse investigated further—with all esoteric cut off the find himself suddenly dumped through a one last trap door into a quart jar filled with water.

Voilà! Mr. Mouse is drowned. The trap door automatically resets itself and is ready for more business.

Carl Hanna of Del Norte is competing with Fuller in the mousetrap department. But Hanna's creation is less elaborate.

OTI Pool Still Draws Big Crowds

Attendance was still high at the Oregon Tech pool despite Tuesday's cooler weather. The number of children taking lessons in the afternoon dropped down a bit but that was due largely to schedules being re-arranged after Monday's record crowd.

Yesterday, still almost as high as last summer's best day at the plunge. The figure represent about half of the attendance number for the opening day, Monday.

Mother Seeking Husband, Son

SEATTLE, June 29 (AP)—A young mother, who has just recovered from severe burns, arrived here today to search for her missing husband and two-year-old son.

Her husband, Richard B. Robinson, 25, wrote her a letter from Seattle a week ago. The couple's son is with him.

Grasshopper Infestation Invades Harney County Area

PORTLAND, June 29 (AP)—A vast horde of migratory grasshoppers now covers 800,000 acres in desolate southern Harney county—but entomologists think they won't get into farming areas.

Dr. Don C. Mote, head of the Oregon State college entomology department, reported that it is a new species for Oregon. The hoppers came into the state from northern Nevada last year.

They have been seen on the wing in the past week, rising in clouds to 200 feet at times, he said.

He noted however, that their migration last year moved them only 40 miles and a long trek into farming lands is not expected this year.

Field men have been at work to control them and while there has been a good kill, "the total decrease in grasshopper numbers is insignificant compared to the entire mass."

Fire Destroys Garage-Workshop

An estimated $2900 loss was caused by fire about 10:30 Wednesday morning when a combination garage-workshop belonging to Tom Sheehy, 177 Gary, caught fire.

The suburban fire department answered the call and while damage to the garage was considerable, firemen kept the blaze from spreading to the nearby Sheehy residence.

Sometimes You Just Can't Win

PORTLAND, June 29 (AP)—A woman who beat off an attempted hold-up yesterday was convinced today that you can't win.

Vetha M. Howe, whacked an armed man over the head with a club yesterday when he entered her tavern and growled, "This is a stickup." In return she braved a bullet that tore a hole in her clothing, but did not harm her.

She thought he was bluffing with a blank cartridge at the time. When she learned the truth, they carted her off to a hospital.

So the tavern stayed closed the rest of the day.

Log Damage To Water Supply Eyed

OREGON CITY, June 29 (AP)—A second survey of the Clackamas river watershed was made Wednesday to investigate charges that the Oregon City water supply was endangered by logging there.

The charges came from John Borden, Clackamas county sanitarian, who blamed the bureau of land management for the logging on the south fork of the river.

Daniel L. Goidy, regional administrator of the bureau of land management, asserted the charges were groundless. He said logging there was proceeding according to plan, and that it helped, rather than harmed, the watershed.

Goidy added that the selective logging and scattered cuttings made there would promote a better cover of young trees and provided a more vigorous root growth to retain water. He said this method was employed in the Seattle watershed.

He also said the method enabled counties to augment income, pointing out western Oregon counties received between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 annually from O & C timber sales.

Bombers Blast Shanghai Sector

SHANGHAI, June 29 (AP)—Low flying nationalist bombers blasted the crowded Chapel district of Shanghai today, killing at least two persons and injuring upwards of 100.

Police and rescue workers dug the injured out of blasted buildings hours after the planes completed their mission.

Machine guns blasted away at the leisurely flying bombers but had no effect. Reports of the number of raiders varied from two to six planes.

Chapel is a densely populated Chinese residential section. One slick of bombs fell in a rice paddy near the Lungwa airport. Other bombs reportedly hit the Bubbling Well cemetery.

Hospitals reported at least 70 seriously injured, had been received.

New Weapons Aid Greeks In Rebel War

WASHINGTON, June 29 (AP)—The American advised Greek army is using two chemical weapons with such effect that Greek rebels and their Soviet bloc backers have raised the cry of "poison gas."

Officials reported this Tuesday after the Moscow radio declared that "200 tons of special material" for making gas was unloaded recently "with great secrecy" from an American ship in Greece.

Denying that outlawed gas had been—or will be—used, officials said the charge might have stemmed from the use of two other chemical weapons permitted under the recognized rules of warfare: napalm, an incendiary bomb which has the effect of flaming oil, and sulphur smoke-pots.

The smoke has been used to route the guerrillas from caves. Napalm bombs, which were used with deadly effect against the Japanese in World War II, are dropped from planes to disperse rebel groups.

Greyhound In KF Installs Teletype Unit

A teletype machine has been installed in the Klamath Falls Greyhound bus station.

Klamath Falls received its first message on the machine Saturday. The local office is in the Northern California-Oregon circuit with Redding the farthest point in the circuit to the south and Portland to the north.

At the present time messages received in the local Greyhound office pertain to cities throughout the circuit. A selector will be added later which will enable the local ticket agent to send news to any one particular town in the circuit.

Messages farther south than Redding or north of the Portland office are relayed from those two points. News clicking over the wire include matters pertaining to schedules, drivers, the weather, reservations, lost articles on buses and last-minute addition of sections.

DELAY

LONDON, June 29 (AP)—The deputy foreign ministers, agreeing to a request by Russia, delayed for a day the four power talks on an Austrian independence treaty. Originally the negotiations had been scheduled to begin tomorrow.

The talks here are designed to produce a draft Austrian treaty by September. The Big Four foreign ministers at their recent Paris conference apparently settled the major differences between Russia and the west over an Austrian pact.
