

College Graduates Doing Better In Way Of Babies

WASHINGTON, July 5 (AP)—Women who are college graduates are beginning to have more babies. While they still aren't having as many babies as the women who barely went to school at all, the college girls showed surprising gains from 1940 to 1947.

That's what the population reference bureau said last week.

The bureau was founded as a nonprofit, scientific, educational organization to coordinate and distribute population data. It's supported by donations.

As recently as two weeks ago the bureau was gloomy about the college graduate mother. Ditto for father. It had completed a study on the graduates of 25 years ago, and this was so babyless the bureau wondered: "Does A. B. mean abortion babies?"

The class of '24, the bureau found, was falling far short of replacing itself.

But the more recent collegian is doing much better.

Census bureau figures show that during 1940-1947 the girl graduates have increased the birth rate for their group by 81 per cent. This compares with a 32 per cent average gain for all women.

But, continues the bureau, women who have graduated from college still don't have babies at the rate of the less educated.

Four Fined For Illegal Meat Sale

PORTLAND, July 6 (AP)—District Judge Frank E. Day has found four meat dealers guilty of selling underaged veal, but observed that the legislature had arbitrarily set the age limit at four weeks.

His ruling upheld the validity of the act, but noted that authorities had advised him veal may be mature between five and 21 days.

Meat dealers Morris Goldfoot and Warren O'Leary, Portland, were fined $500 each and given suspended jail sentences of 180 days. N. W. Andrews, Tigard Meat company, also was sentenced and fined $400, but both were suspended. Dealer Carl Ruden, Portland, was dealt a $500 suspended fine.

Veal under four weeks of age is defined in the act as unfit for human consumption.
