

Portlanders Eye Recall For Elliott

PORTLAND, July 11 (AP)—The young republican organization of this county invited democrats and other groups today to start a recall move against the Multnomah county sheriff who is feuding with Portland newspapers and some of his own staff.

The young republican president, Donald C. Walker, announced the recall move after Sheriff M. L. Elliott filed a $300,000 libel suit against the Oregonian and challenged his critics to "go ahead and start a recall."

County Democratic Chairman Nicholas Grant rallied to the sheriff's defense, calling the recall attempt "straight political issue" and accusing the Portland newspapers of "persecuting" the sheriff.

Other democratic spokesmen, however, indicated a possible willingness to support the recall if assured that a democratic successor would be chosen. Owen Card, first vice president of the young democrats, said he personally would favor a recall.

The controversy over Elliott, simmering since he admitted making incorrect statements about his background during his political campaign, boiled over last week when he suspended Stanley MacDonald, the veteran head of the criminal identification bureau in the sheriff's office.

Other county officials charged that MacDonald—one of the best known civil service men on the sheriff's staff—had been unjustly treated. Both Portland newspapers attacked the sheriff's action in editorials.

Saturday the sheriff filed a $500,000 libel suit against the Oregonian. That was not based on its editorial attack, however, but on a columnist's report—admittedly incorrect—that Elliott was seen peering during office hours. The columnist retracted the statement next day, explaining it was another man who looked like the sheriff.

ANNOUNCER — Walter A. Holt, manager of the Pacific International Livestock exposition, Portland, will be official announcer for the Pendleton Roundup August 24-27. Holt is widely known for his announcing skill and has had experience announcing for many large horse shows and rodeos on the coast.

No Permit Plan Works In Forest

The "no campfire permit" try-out this year in Rogue River national forest seems to be working out well with full cooperation of the people using the forest service recreational facilities.

There were more people at Lake o' the Woods over the Fourth of July this year than any previous year, District Forest Ranger Bob Cooper said, and they overflowed camp grounds and recreation sites but were very careful of their fires.

This Sunday, Salvation Army camp and the Scout camp will be opened with Klamath Falls Girl Scouts occupying the camp this next week, and Medford Boy Scouts opening the season at the Boy Scout camp. Medford Girl Scouts will follow the Klamath county group in using the camp.

Arlie Mae Johnson, Malin, returned recently from Camp Longfellow in Bremerton, Wash. where she completed a 10-day course in water safety at the Red Cross aquatic school.

Mrs. Johnson attended as a delegate of the Klamath County Red Cross chapter. She will serve as instructor for the Malin swimming pool.

The national aquatic school from which Mrs. Johnson returned is one of six in the Pacific area offering short intensified study to train young men and women in all phases of water skill, first aid, and accident prevention.

STAMPEDE
ELGIN, July 11 (AP)—The fourth annual Elgin stampede will be held July 15-17.

Our Home Town

It is said that Antonio Stradivari, the famous violin maker, used to tell customers who were in a hurry and who wanted new fiddles right quick, that they could either wait six months for their instruments or else they could take their orders to some other workman. An independent old rascal, he, as all good workmen are apt to be.

During his life—the old man made fiddles for almost seventy of his ninety years—there were three wars fought, and three times the little village of Cremona was under enemy guns.

What did Antonio do? Just kept on making fiddles. Oh, he probably chipped in and contributed to some fund for the defense of the city or donated to the needs of the local destitute. But mostly, he just made fiddles.

And maybe there's an idea for us of this disturbed present day. Which is to keep right on doing the job we have to do and for which we are best fitted. Russian jitters or no, recession talk or no. Just keep making fiddles or doing dependable auto repairing or teaching school and teaching it well or keeping house—doing whatever our work is, the best we know how. Maybe that's the way we can make the best contribution to America and to ourselves.

"Memory Garden is for your pleasure."

Next Monday Mr. Whitlock of the Earl Whitlock Funeral Home will comment on "Keep Small Things Small."

Building Permits Up

After weeks of the doldrums, city building permits got a big boost with the application for construction of Sacred Heart church's new gym and parish hall. Estimated cost of the building is $141,000, largest permit issued in some time.

Lekberg and Duncan are contractors. Other permits okayed by the city council this week are as follows:

- Paul R. Winter, $300, repair porch, 331 N. 10th.
- C. Fitzgerald, $1000, new roof, Klamath Medical clinic.
- C. Fitzgerald, $336, new roof, 321 Alameda.
- C. Fitzgerald, $400, repair roof, Boivin building.
- C. Fitzgerald, $350, repair roof, Mecca.
- C. Fitzgerald, $400, repair roof, Peabler's.
- C. Fitzgerald, $100, Leon's Dress shop.
- C. Fitzgerald, $182, repair roof, 1955 Earle.
- H. E. Houfa, $1000, new ceiling, VFW hall, 515 Klamath.
- A. M. McKenzie, $450, private garage, 2019 Manzanita.
- Leo N. Hula, $300, repair fire loss, 515 Walnut.
- J. F. Nidover, $250, new floor for basement, 915 Addison.
- O. Young, $150, new roof and doors on garage, 2227 Vine.
- J. E. Book, $200, new garage, Darrow street.

Total in permits for this week was $146,418.
