

Detective Slain In Gun Battle

SEATTLE, July 21 (AP)—A city homicide detective, who voluntarily returned in his off-duty hours to help capture a cornered gunman, was killed early today.

Moments later his slayer died in a volley of police fire.

Dead were Detective Harry W. Vosper, about 35, and the gunman, James Jackson, about 50, a Negro. Two others—Johnny Taylor, 33, also a Negro, and Donald M. Reed, 27, a truck driver—were hospitalized with gunshot wounds. Taylor's condition was critical, that of Reed fair.

Vosper was killed as he met Jackson face-to-face at the basement entrance of a two-story house where the gunman was surrounded by more than 20 policemen.

The slaying, climax to a series of shootings that continued over a three-hour period, came as police moved into the house after filling it with tear-gas bombs.

Police said the fatal battle followed an earlier shooting at Taylor's home where Jackson had gone to see his estranged wife. When Mrs. Jackson told him to leave or she would call police, Jackson suddenly fired six shots from a .45 caliber automatic. Three of the bullets struck Taylor. Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Taylor were not hit.

Police traced Jackson's car to the lower Seattle home and assigned Detective Kenny Thomas to watch it. When no one appeared after a considerable time, Reed was called to tow the machine away.

He was shot as he started to hitch up the car.

Vosper, who had investigated the earlier shooting at Taylor's home, was at headquarters talking to friends when the report of Reed's shooting was received.

Before Jackson died he had exchanged several heavy volleys with police through basement windows.

Five boxes of rifle shells were lying on his bed in the basement and a second rifle was leaning against the wall.

Diced cooked carrots and white turnips may be served together in a cream sauce; a small amount of cooked peas (leftover) may also be added for color.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Itch Increases During War

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

During periods of war, scabies, or, as it is commonly called, the seven-year itch, tends to increase. This disease is caused by an insect—sarcoptes scabiei—which burrows into the skin causing terrific itching and irritation.

The disease is more common in the colder months, perhaps because bathing is less common. In the typical case the itching is worse at night than during the daytime. Although scabies is more frequent among those people who do not practice personal cleanliness, it is by no means confined to such individuals.

PREVENTION IMPORTANT

Scabies is acquired from someone else who harbors the insect which causes it. Consequently avoidance of contact with those who might be involved is the best method of prevention. Since the disease tends to involve families or communities, it is important to treat all of those who may have the disease and not just the one who happens to seek the doctor's help.

Not only should possible contacts be sought out and carefully examined for the disease, but bedding, towels, clothing and other articles which touch the skin should be treated, usually by heating.

Many good treatments, some new, some old, are available. Various sulphur preparations have been recognized for years as valuable for this disease. In addition, there have been a number of new good treatments proposed including DDT, a chemical called benzobenzothiazole, rotenone, pyrethrum, and others.

Most of these substances, however, can produce secondary irritation of the skin or other complications, so that their use except under observation of a physician is not advised.

Hampton Band Slated Here On Saturday

Lionel Hampton, who heads what is claimed "America's greatest colored band," will bring his orchestra to the armory Saturday night for dancing from 9 till 1.

Baldy Evans, who secured Hampton's services, has announced that tickets may be secured at Derby's Music company.

Hampton features not only good dance music but has a wealth of entertainment with his troupe of 24 musicians and entertainers.

Hampton himself is known as the "King of the vibraharp," possessing the only gold-plated vibraharp in the world.

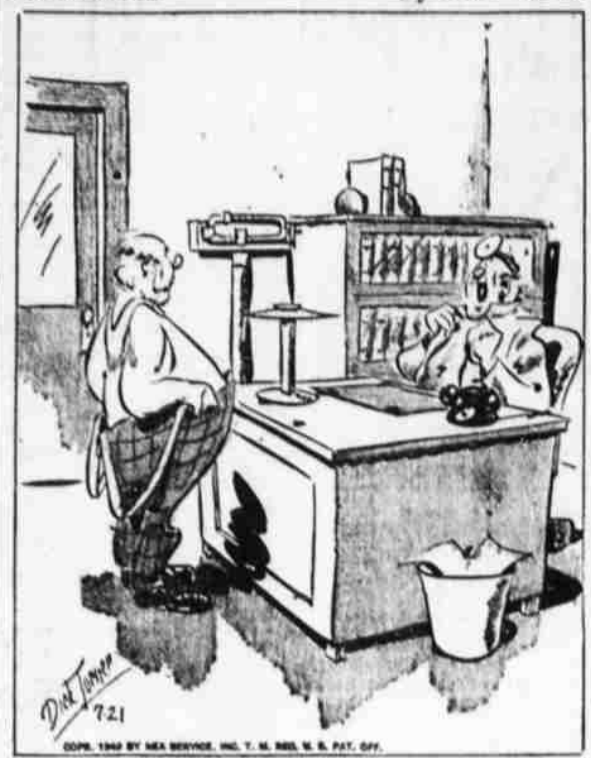

Hampton organized his own band in 1940 after several years as a featured star with Benny Goodman. Hampton's orchestra has made hundreds of records for both Decca and Victor.

He played in Portland last Friday night and reports from Bert McElroy, son of the late well-known Cole McElroy, label his band as the "greatest show aggregation he or his famous father have ever brought to Portland."

all kinds of medicines on the skin as you have apparently done. A proper diagnosis should be obtained and only then can the correct treatment be employed.

Aussie Troops To Be Coal Miners

SYDNEY, Australia, July 21 (AP)—The Australian government plans to send 3000 troops to mine coal from open cuts in New South Wales August 1, unless the crippling coal strike is over by that time.

The troops are expected to supply 55,000 tons of coal per week, enough to keep up the present ration of electricity and gas in New South Wales.

The labor government was reported to have rejected a proposal to use members of the anti-communist Australian workers union for fear of creating a permanent split in the trade union movement.

Warmer weather today eased the crisis caused by the strike, which will be four weeks old tomorrow.
