Work Starts On Improving Malin-Klamath Falls Road

Traffic will be slowed from now until the end of October on 7.8 miles of the Klamath Falls-Malin highway with actual improvement construction launched this week by the state highway department.

The stretch, for which the contract was let April 18, is from Henry Semon's ranch to the improved section at the Lost River bridge.

Also included in the contract is widening of .4 of a mile in the city of Malin near the park.

Work on the 7.8-mile stretch will include the widening of the shoulders and resurfacing with rock and oil.

Supervising the $233,434 task, awarded to J. N. and M. J. Conley, Portland contractors, is P. P. Whitmore, state highway resident engineer.

Crews have been busy since May 23 stock-piling material from the rock quarry two miles east of Malin's store. The stock-piling plant was shut down last week and road work started Monday of this week.

Twelve thousand yards of rock was stock-piled for the highway chore.

Whitmore said this week that it will not be necessary to establish detours during the highway construction. But the stretch will be under restricted conditions and traffic will be controlled with the use of signs and flagmen.

Motorists are cautioned to use extreme care from now until the end of October, estimated time for completion.
