J. W. Whiteline stopped at the Frank Hurd place one day last week and put his snow white stallion, "Rajah" through many stunts for several neighbor boys and girls to witness.

"Rajah" was a wild stallion only a couple years back, said Whiteline, but now he is performing before crowds of people at various wild West shows, held in different parts of the country.

Whiteline is giving away a black saddle mare Sunday, July 24 at 1 p. m. to the boy or girl that produces the best trained saddle horse at the free show he plans to hold in the Stewart-Lenoir district, at the "Pop" Johnson riding stables. A 12 by 12-foot pump house with five inch walls, filled with sawdust and a cement floor houses the high pressure pump and 22-gallon water tank. Breeze said the well driller, Jesse Anderson, had to drill only 75 feet when he struck an ample flow of water, and never drilled through any rock. A six-inch casing, and an inch and a quarter pipe was installed in the well.

Another thing Breeze says he is proud of, is "Cinders", a 17-month-old black Labrador dog that he is training for field trials. Cinders is a daughter of "Trigger," who day was July 19. A special cake was baked for Homer and Mrs. Hurd, and they cut it together, after making the customary "wish".
