You Can't Keep A Good Ogopogo Down, Anyway Not In Kelowna, In Okanogan

KELOWNA, B.C., July 27 (AP) Y... can't keep a good Ogopogo down.

"And what," you inquire, "is an Ogopogo?"

A good question. At this Okanogan lakeside city today they're beginning to wonder.

He used to be known only as a cavorting sea-serpent. But the other morning, they say, the Ogopogo went for a stroll on the beach.

Various descriptions have labeled the Ogopogo as having sometimes a sheep-like head, sometimes a serpent-like body and once black coils.

All those who claim to have seen him agree on one point: He undulates!

But the footprints have everyone baffled. Coming out of the water is a trail of prints—cup-shaped imprints with eight toe-marks—about a mile south of here. The trail extended along a short section of beach and then re-entered the water.

Word got around and a corps of newspaper men from Vancouver made haste to the scene, made notes, and made stories in their journals. The reports tallied: eight toe marks.

And an American tourist, W. C. Ulrich of Omak, Wash., claims he heard "a terrific splash during the night."

Although it's only in the last few years white people claim to have seen him, the Ogopogo is part of an Indian Legend. The red man named him "Auck."

Years ago a bone one and one-half feet long and about a foot through, alleged to have come from the back of one of Ogopogo's ancestors, was found at nearby Rocky Point.

Another time the Indians were hunting deer by their method of chasing them to the water where the squaws waited in canoes for the kill. An exceptionally large deer was being pursued by the squaws when it sank "as if drawn under, while the water boiled as in a great cauldron."

It is said that at the north end of Lake Okanogan a fountain of water 30 to 40 feet high has been seen to rise as from a hidden hose-pipe.

Ogopogo isn't B.C.'s only maritime monstrosity. There's Caddy (cadborosaurus) the long, slimy, roving sea monster which keeps popping out of the coastal waters. And until the time of her demise, back in 1941, there was Sarah the sea-hag, a distinctly graceless relative of Caddy.

And now the Ogopogo goes for a stroll.

Who knows—if the Ogopogo splashing very early in the morning is getting bold enough to leave the lake, he may be kind enough . . . put in an appearance at Kelowna's 43rd annual regatta, Aug. 2-3.
