Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

A DAY or two ago an untrue report ran through the town to the effect that a certain well-known business man had died. The Herald and News received dozens of telephone inquiries, and as the hours wore on the false story developed in detail to the point where some people were telling just where and how the death occurred and what caused it.

EPLEY

"Always check a rumor" is a rule around this newspaper office, and on the first call, a reporter telephoned the man's place of business. He answered the 'phone. That took care of the situation so far as we were concerned, but the false story ran on and on and naturally became very disturbing and distasteful to the man in question.

Who started it? It seems probable that the story began when somebody mis-heard a radio report concerning the death of another man whose name faintly resembles that of our happily alive business man friend. Because the story went so far, it is hard to believe that just one person started it. Several must have misunderstood the radio pronunciation of the name.

This brings us back to two old suggestions of ours intended to prevent errors in information growing out of radio newscasting, which may be entirely accurate and yet lead to such incidents as occurred here this week.

First, it is suggested to members of radio audiences that they listen responsibly if they listen at all. Hit and miss attention to what is coming over the air probably is responsible for what occurred.

The other suggestion is to radio news reporters. We think they should repeat, at the end of news items concerning deaths, serious accidents, etc., the name of the one or more key individuals involved. Casual listeners hear a name or a statement which catches their attention, but if it is given only once they may be uncertain as to just what it was, or they may have not heard it correctly. That repeat at the end will put them right, and prevent the dissemination of misinformation.

It is not our intention to be impertinent or presumptuous in making such suggestions about a "rival" news agency. It is an idea we offer just to help keep the news record straight, which is a worthy objective of all of us engaged in the news business.

Briefs From The Pocket File

"COLDEST summer in more than 30 years" is what F. F. McCready, pioneer rancher on Sprague river above Chiloquin, has to say about the current season . . . Furthermore, Mr. McCready says that he would like to know what happened to the water in the river this year . . . Despite the heavy snows of last winter, the river is exceptionally low right now, he reported to us on a visit to town this week . . . Winnemucca-to-the-Sea enthusiasts have something to crow about in the calling of bids for a 23-mile stretch on the Denio-Winnemucca end of the road from Alturas east . . . It may seem far away now, but you may be driving smooth, paved highway there some day on your way to Salt Lake City, Denver, Cheyenne and other points east . . . Incidentally, this department still receives many inquiries about this route, indicating its potential value in the regional highway set-up.

If parking meters pay for better lights for Klamath's business district, people may still feel that the penny and nickel eaters are a valuable annoyance . . . There won't be any Lake o' the Woods road construction this year, but it is on the calendar for next . . . We'll have more information about that to report in a week or two . . . Oregon Tech is getting set for the start of fall term August 1, which reminds that the summer is fleeting . . . Another month and kids everywhere will be getting ready for school . . . Meanwhile, we need a lot of good growing weather for those crops that support the schools that educate the kids.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

THE mayor of New York is a fiscal and administrative official who deals with a budget of over a billion dollars a year, approximately the size of the budget of the state of New York. He is charged with the policing, the sanitation, the education (elementary, high school and college), the transportation facilities of 8,000,000 human beings.

One would expect that, in the metropolis of the world, such a public post would go to a man of extraordinary administrative capacity and financial genius. Actually, the city is in very sad shape financially. Real estate taxes are so high as to be a factor in the discouragement of building. The transportation problem has become so fouled that to many it seems hopeless. The city has embarked upon the socialistic enterprise of operating its own means of transportation, but that has not eliminated strikes, provided decent working conditions nor found the financing for essential improvements. The streets are dirty beyond anything that has been visible in the more than half century that I have known New York.

So the politicians selected, in private conclave, three politicians who are to run for mayor against one another. Not one of them is famous for his administrative skill or financial genius.

William O'Dwyer, the current mayor, has been a policeman, a lawyer, a magistrate, and the district attorney of Brooklyn. He is an affable person, possessing great charm and is, no doubt, public-spirited. He has quarreled with Tammany Hall and is what may euphemistically be called pro-labor; that is, he knows where the votes are. He is direct and at times hasd-spoken. His administration of New York during the past four years has not been particularly notable, but it, on the record, has been no worse than the administration of Fiorello La Guardia, who won great fame internationally but left his town bankrupt.

Newbold Morris has, at times, been a republican but generally travels with those who like to call themselves liberals. He is handsome, charming, well-spoken, rather aristocratic in manner but not startlingly bright. I have personally heard the very men who brought about his nomination comment on his good intentions and lack of acumen. He was president, for a time, of the city council, when its meetings attracted attention for their lack of deliberation and their general tendency to become a brawl. Perhaps it was not his fault, a president not being a czar. Nothing in his career would indicate administrative skill or financial knowledge.

Fiery Solon

VITO MARCANTONIO is a fiery little congressman who represents the East of Harlem. He was a protege of LaGuardia at one time. He has steadily and without deviation supported, by speeches and votes in congress, the communist party line as expounded in the "Daily Worker" and other communist publications. He heads the American labor party, which, in New York state, is regarded as the political arm of communism. He has never demonstrated administrative or financial ability and no one would falsely accuse him of possessing either.

I have scanned the tickets for other men of outstanding ability in other posts and no such names appear. Apparently, the democrats and republicans have done the best they could to garner the votes of the organized racial and religious components of the city. All tickets are evenly balanced to take care of that, but no ticket shows any particular regard for the city.

It is all an interesting commentary on what these politicians glibly call democracy. The republicans ordinarily could not elect anyone, so their problem was to form a coalition with Dave Dubinsky's liberal party and International Ladies Garment Workers union, which controls a large block of votes. Dubinsky chose the slate and should Newbold Morris be elected, Dubinsky will be the boss of New York.

On the other hand, Ed Flynn, the Bronx boss of the democratic party, insisted on the renomination of Bill O'Dwyer, after he had declined the office and another had been selected for the nomination. Should O'Dwyer be elected, Ed Flynn will be the Boss.

And, of course, should Vito Marcantonio be elected, I suppose, by past performances, Joe Stalin will be the Boss.

There it is, gentlemen. You have your choice—Dubinsky, Flynn, or Stalin.

THE GALLUP POLL

Democratic Party Still Very Popular

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., July 26 The powerful hold of the democratic party on the American electorate is demonstrated afresh in a nation-wide survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Voters in all walks of life were asked which party—democratic or republican—they think can handle better a series of eight public problems.

Gallup

The democratic party is given the edge over the republicans by voters on six of the eight issues. The republican party is given a preference only in the matter of cutting down government expenses and a very slight preference in handling the communist problem.

The significance of these findings is apparent as political leaders lay their plans for the 1950 congressional election. It seems clear that the republican party will have to put up extremely strong and persuasive candidates if they are to overcome the great sentiment favorable to the democratic party today.

The poll findings are as follows:

"As you feel today, which political party—the republican or democratic—can handle these problems better?"

	Rep.	Dem.	No Diff.	No Opin.
Keeping farmers' income high	15	55	18	12
Cutting down the number of unemployed people	21	41	28	10
Seeing that everyone—colored people and others—have equal rights	21	40	27	12
Reducing the cost of living	28	35	29	8
Dealing with Russia and other foreign countries	24	30	31	15
Reducing strikes and labor troubles	31	34	23	12
Handling communists in this country	28	27	31	14
Cutting down government expenses	43	22	24	11

One of the outstanding features of the above table is the overwhelming acceptance throughout the country of the belief that prosperous conditions for the farmers are tied up with the fortunes of the democratic party.

Farmers themselves give the democratic party a marked preference in the matter of keeping farm income high. However their vote is not as one-sided as that of all voters. Here is the farm vote:

Vote of Farmers

Republican	25
Democratic	44
No Difference	22
No Opinion	9

Independent Voters

A special analysis was made of persons who classify themselves as independent voters. While the general tendency of these voters was to say that it makes no great difference which party handles the problems, those who expressed a definite preference for one party over the other, favored the democratic party on four issus—cutting down on unemployment, keeping farm income high, dealing with Russia and defending civil rights.

The republican party was given an advantage on the remaining four—cutting down government expenses, reducing the cost of living, handling communists and reducing strikes.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Take Your Old Age Calmly

BY EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

People grow old at different rates of speed. Some may show signs of mental aging comparatively early, while others may go into their nineties without showing any serious mental changes.

The development of senility or an aged mind is practically never sudden. An increased tendency to forget the names of people, dates, or places is a common sign of mental aging. This alone should not be taken too seriously.

Only when loss of memory has associated with other changes in mental functioning is it proper to speak of true senility. Even in this condition, however, the memory for events which happened 20 or more years before may be very good, while that for events which occured recently may be poor.

Don't Become Upset

The person who has developed serious mental deficiencies because of great age is not, as a rule, much upset about it himself. Family and friends are often sadly distressed. It seems tragic to see a person who has formerly shown great mental and physical powers lose those powers and not even know it.

Nothing can be done about it. Therefore, family and friends should take these changes calmly and not worry too much about them. If the memory is poor, there is no reason why a notebook cannot be carried and used to jot things down. Any other aids desired should be used without hesitation.

The old person is in a difficult stage of life both for himself or herself, and for friends and family. There is no substitute for youth. However, accepting things as they are will make life smoother for all concerned.

Note: Dr. Jordan is unable to answer individual questions from readers. However, each day he will answer one of the most frequently asked questions in his column.

The Doctor Answers

QUESTION: Does pneumonia come from a cold?

ANSWER: The germs which cause pneumonia are commonly found in normal throats. Pneumonia does frequently follow a cold, probably because the cold lowers the resistance and allows the germs already present to invade the lungs and produce the disease pneumonia.

Miller Rites Held In Cottage Grove

Funeral services were held Monday at Cottage Grove for Darrel Calvi Miller, two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miller Jr., of Dorena and formerly of this city, who was killed in an automobile accident Friday at Dorena.

The little boy was the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Herman of 819 Rose and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Herman, formerly of Wocus and now living in Colorado.

Interment was at Brownsville.

Duffy Unable To Serve As MC

TULELAKE, Calif., July 27—The Tulelake chamber of commerce has announced cancellation of Henry Duffy's appearance as master of ceremonies for its annual dinner this Friday evening.

The dinner will be held as scheduled, however Duffy, west coast play producer, will not be present.

Chamber officials said that when arrangements were made to have Duffy emcee the dinner, he was in San Francisco, and the chamber was to pay his expenses from there. In the meantime he has gone to Los Angeles, and the chamber feels the cost of round trip plane expenses from there are prohibitive.

Grizzly Mountain Fire Controlled

Fire on Grizzly mountain Tuesday afternoon was spotted from Chase mountain lookout at 2:24 p. m., and crews were dispatched immediately from headquarters, Penny spring and Weyerhaeuser Camp 4.

The fire, burning through slash, covered about 15 acres before it was brought under control at 6:30 p. m. Klamath Forest Protective association officials started checking into the cause of the fire this morning.

PIN-WORMS GO! New Treatment Gets Real Results

Don't let your child suffer a single needless minute of distress with Pin-Worms. And it can happen. Medical experts report that an amazing number of children (and adults too) are victims of these ugly pests that live and grow inside the human body.

You should and can do something about Pin-Worms. A new, scientific treatment—Jayne's P-W Vermifuge—offers real relief. P-W contains a special, medically-approved ingredient that destroys Pin-Worms in the intestine and removes them from the body.

So watch for the warning signs of Pin-Worms in your family . . . fidgeting, nose picking and especially the nagging, irritating rectal itch. Then ask your druggist for P-W, the small, easy-to-take tablets perfected by the famous Jayne Co., specialists in worm remedies for over 100 years. Destroy those Pin-Worms . . . relieve that itch.

Just Remember: P-W ® for Pin-Worms!

Lions Club Plans For Fun Frolic

The Lions club is getting set for another Fun Frolic, similar to the first annual one held in 1948, and a special meeting has been called for Friday noon. It will be a luncheon meeting in the Winema.

This year's entertainment will be another "package" setup from Hollywood. Plans are for it to be a much larger affair than last year. Tentative dates are set for September 27, 28 and 29.

QUICK WORK

WEBSTER, N. Y., July 27 (AP) Webster firemen were leading an annual carnival parade down main street when the alarm rang.

The volunteers broke ranks, raced a mile and put out a fire in a parked automobile.

They were back in time to fall in smartly at the rear of the procession.

The World Today

DeWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

This great metropolitan air and sea port of New York, which is my headquarters, is the gateway through which pours an endless stream of the world's striking personalities, and so we get to meet a lot of interesting folk—and a lot who aren't interesting, for that matter.

Mackenzie

I've just spent some time with one of the interesting transients—Tetsu Katayama, Japan's first socialist premier who came to power in the country's first post-war election. He is out of office now and has been making an intensive study of socialism's progress in European countries, in preparation for a fresh socialist campaign in Japan.

Nippon's socialist leader is a 62-year-old lawyer who was elected premier in May, 1947, by an almost unanimous vote of the house of representatives under the new constitution. However, he actually was a minority premier, since his party didn't have a majority.

The people expected Katayama to perform an economic miracle by lightening the load of the man-on-the-street overnight. His government did win praise for its apparent sincerity in attacking the accumulated economic problem, but he couldn't deliver fast enough, and so fell after some ten months before a combined conservative and communist assault, aided by the desertion of his own left wingers.

Fast Answer

Katayama has a quiet and unassuming personality which one would scarcely expect to find in the two-fisted leader of a great party. But you quickly sense one source of his power in the fast straight-thinking in which he replies to questions. He wastes no words.

The former premier said he had found that European socialist governments were making good progress in rehabilitation. Some of them, however, were making the great mistake of trying to compromise with communism. He was emphatic in declaring that socialism and communism couldn't work together — that there could be no successful compromise. The Japanese socialists, he said, would develop along their own lines, quite apart from the communists.

Katayama said he believed that moral rehabilitation must be an integral part of Japan's recovery. He reminded me that he is a Christian, whereupon I asked him if he felt that the principles of the Sermon on the Mount could be applied in his country in view of the fact that most of its people belong to other religions.

His conclusion was quick and interesting. He said that those great principles could be accepted by any religion, providing theological arguments were left out. In short, a person needn't subscribe to Christianity to be a believer in those principles.

Andrew Loney Home Again

Andrew Loney Jr., supervisor of music education in the city schools, has just returned from teaching for six weeks at the University of Portland.

Loney has been added to the faculty of the graduate school of the university. He and Mrs. Loney will leave August 1 for a vacation trip, returning to Klamath Falls Monday, August 22. He will be in his office here after that date.

For the first four weeks of the high school summer music camp at the University of Portland, Loney was co-director with W. H. Hannah, supervisor of music at Vancouver, Wash. Students from Klamath Falls who attended the camp were Julie Harnden, Geraldine Lewis, Marilyn Moore, Joyce Hoagland, George Vlahos and Jimmy Metler.

Alcoholic Powder

The word "alcohol" originally meant "powder," and was derived from the Arabic word for a powder used for painting the eyebrows, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Exchange club members heard an informal talk on the future of Klamath Falls and vicinity when they met for their regular luncheon Tuesday in the Winema.

In the speech by Frank Jenkins, The Herald and News publisher, it was pointed out that Klamath county with a diminishing supply of pine should strive to obtain additional payroll volume by manufacturing lumber here instead of shipping elsewhere as in the past. The speaker also touched on the need of manufacturing and processing plants for our agricultural goods.

ATTACK ON ELEANOR

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., (To the Editor)—From a political viewpoint, the attack on Mrs. Roosevelt is incomprehensible. Here are the representatives of a foreign controlled organization attacking a citizen for her opinion on a law that is considered bogie in this nation as it effects separation of church and state.

On the Spanish business is it strange for Mrs. Roosevelt to have an opinion? Wouldn't an American be more apt to favor a republic than a monarchy?

Hitler and Mussolini were not noted for their philanthropy, and it is reasonable to assume that the people who had the most to lose by the Spanish preferring a republic, for the German and Italian goon squads to protect their interests in Spain. They aren't broke, let them loan Franco $50,000,000.

And it is also reasonable to assume that for past favors Hitler is safe today in a secluded retreat in Spain or Argentina the bunker business in Berlin never was convincing.

W. L. HALLEY,

City Highway Commission To Meet

The new city highway committee, recently appointed by Mayor Robert A. Thompson to tackle city traffic and routing problems, will hold its initial meeting tonight at 7:30 in the council chambers.

Dr. C. J. Cox, chairman of the committee, said that tonight's session will be primarily a "get acquainted" confab to ascertain just what highway problems are in the city.

"We plan to cooperate with the county in finding out what our highway problems are in relation to theirs," Cox said.

The new committee was formed to take a burden off the planning commission, already overloaded with the re-zoning survey.

Other members of the committee are Chamber President Fred Hoagland, Ed Bell, Harry Boivin and Tom Walters.
