Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

THERE'S little doubt that Mulanomah county's Sheriff Mike Elliott ought to be thrown out on his ear. He is a political mistake, graphically illustrating how guess-and-by-gosh balloting in the big cities can produce an occasional lemon.

EPLEY

But one wonders if the Portland papers and the critics of Elliott can keep pouring it on without producing that peculiar reaction in public sentiment that so often helps the underdog even when he's a highly undeserving underdog.

The Elliott denouncers have dug up a lot of stuff, much of it convincing. The average objective observer would probably agree that a recall should be successful.

But a lot of people have funny ideas about things like that. They hear so much that is bad about somebody that they begin to sympathize with him. It gets so the more they hear, the stronger that feeling is.

After a while, it becomes advantageous for the man under attack to have new assaults made upon him. He begins to gain rather than lose with each added sally, no matter how sound and factual the criticism may be. If he is sharp enough to sense what is going on, he invites attack and assumes the role of the martyr. If he can get his wife and kids into the picture, he's got a darned good chance of coming out top dog.

Mr. Elliott may not be smart enough to capitalize on that situation. Portland people, especially Portland women, are a pretty conscientious lot with a strong sense of public morality. But in every group of voters, there are those with that "I'm for the underdog" complex, and that may be a factor in the outcome of the Multnomah squabble.

The anti-Elliott group would do well to avoid any appearance of persecution.

Yule Decorations

KLAMATH FALLS merchants deserve the highest praise for their decision to proceed with an ambitious Christmas decoration scheme for the community. Their plan means bright lights and huge garlands, bells and Santa Clauses that will create the atmosphere of glamour and happiness that is so important and proper at the Yuletide.

It is a project that will bring joy to the people of the community and of the entire surrounding area. It will discharge the obligation of the big town to all the people who visit it in the exciting Christmas shopping season.

The decorations to be acquired in this program will be permanent. They must be properly stored for use from year to year.

The decorations, incidentally, are not strictly a mercenary enterprise. They will bring pleasure to everybody. The merchants have accepted an obligation which is not entirely theirs and for that reason appreciation is especially due them.

Gilchrist Gift

AN outstanding incident in the history of giving to worthy causes here was the contribution made by Gilchrist Timber company employes to the Cancer Research Fund as a memorial to Mrs. Frank Gilchrist. In this way the Gilchrist employes gave practical expression of the sympathy they felt for Frank Gilchrist and the affection they held for Mrs. Gilchrist, remembered by all who knew her for her graciousness and hospitality.

The Cancer Fund has received many contributions of this nature through none so large or representing so many people. The unsolicited support given this particular program is remarkable.

Briefs From The Pocket File

THE story goes that some local youngsters at a picnic picked up some dry ice and were using it to simulate smoking . . . One of them inhaled sharply and a chunk of the ice stuck in his throat . . . It was touch and go with the stuff burning his throat until a quick-thinking woman poured milk down him for immediate relief and the ice was then removed . . . This true report is told here for the warning it may carry . . . Here's a complaint from a mother who wheels her baby down town in a buggy . . . She says that the curb at Ninth and Main is badly broken up and it's almost impossible to take a baby buggy over it . . . The city, she says, should fix that curb for the sake of local mothers who, if they didn't have to stay home taking care of babies, would be down at the council meeting insisting that it be done . . . A college student says that farmers and foresters may not like this year's weather, but for vacationists, it's wonderful.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

WHENEVER a communist or a fellow-traveler, or just a plain liberal gets into trouble, all sorts of committees, organizations, funds are established to protect them. Thousands of dollars are collected, to which, only too often, soft-headed capitalists, republicans and democrats, their wives and daughters, contribute on some mistaken notion that if enough noise is made, an injustice has been done.

But when a fine American woman stands up, at great risk, to defend her country, to fight for our way of life, to denounce those who love our enemy, she is permitted to take the full brunt of the battle alone, to suffer the indignity of having her home and her savings impounded, to await the outcome of an expensive trial which may last for years. That is exactly what has happened to Mrs. Hester McCullough of Greenwich, Connecticut.

She had subscribed to the Greenwich Community Concert association and, after paying her fees, discovered that Larry Adler, the harmonica player, and Paul Draper, the dancer, had been put on the program. She objected because of their affiliations with communist-front organizations.

Mrs. McCullough wrote a letter setting forth her views. The letter was published in "The Greenwich Time." The Greenwich Community Concert association thereupon accepted her "resignation" which had never been proffered by her. She asked for a hearing which was not granted. However, she gave the association a list of nine communist-front organizations, cited by the attorney general of the United States, the house committee on un-American activities, and the Tenney report to the California legislature, with which Adler and Draper were associated.

Although Mrs. McCullough was not permitted to attend a meeting at which she might defend her position, Adler and Draper, accompanied by their lawyers and by Ward French and Frederick Schang of the Columbia Artists' bureau were present. Adler and Draper admitted membership in these organizations, and others of a similar nature, but denied that they were communists or ever had been; they insisted that they are loyal Americans.

* * * *

No Measurement

IT is impossible to use precise measurements in matters of this sort. All fellow-travelers deny that they are communists and most of them are only sympathetic. Also all communists, as is being made clear in Judge Medina's court daily, insist that they are patriotic Americans. Also many innocent persons are involved in accusations of communist affiliation because they choose to hook up with communist-front organizations. No one can know for sure if a person is a communist unless he chooses to expose the relationship himself. Therefore, it is possible only to use certain yardsticks to make up one's mind about them. These yardsticks are:

1. Membership in organizations declared to be subversive by the attorney general of the United States, a function of his office thus far upheld by the courts;

2. Persistent appearance of that person's name in organizations as a member, sponsor, speaker, petitioner, as published by the house committee on un-American activities. It is usually held that six such citations remove innocence from a person's attitude;

3. Constant shifting of view and activities in such a manner as always to conform with the Stalinist line as stipulated by the "Daily Worker," and other communist media. Conformity to communist orthodoxy indicates, if not membership in the party, sympathy with it.

Mrs. McCullough was guided by these yardsticks and got herself in a $100,000 libel suit. Under Connecticut law everything she owned, her bank account and her home could be and was attached. Adler and Draper retained, as their lawyer, Kenneth Bradley, former republican national committeeman, and partner of Raymond Baldwin, who had been governor and United States senator.

Mrs. McCullough's funds having been attached, she has difficulty raising money to fight the case. So far, her friends contributed about $3000 which is obviously not enough.

This is an American fight. This woman said that she objected that her fees should be used to pay the expenses of artists who belonged to organizations which the attorney general designated subversive. For that she is being embarrassed financially. This is a case of free speech and all who believe that the right to protest is not limited to radicals ought to get into this fight.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (AP)—If you really can't decide what to get me for Christmas, there's a little doodad on display over at the Waldorf-Astoria that would suit me like chestnut dressing suits roast turkey.

Stan Kilarr says "I'll stick my chin out on this one." . . .

"Butter Please" is the tune he favors for the Stop the Music mystery tune. He isn't dropping "Parnell's March" as a possibility but thinks culinary request tune is good enough to bet on.

Late tip from Behind the Mike on the mystery tune, Stop the music. It's similar to Killarr's—"Butter'd Peas."

Not that I'm hinting, mind you. As a matter of fact —'m not sure what I am doing. I've just come back from that $5,009,000 jewel show at the Waldorf and frankly, friend, I'm glitter-happy.

The American National Retail Jewelers, whose baby it is, says its the biggest display of precious stones and baubles ever held. Acres of diamonds. Bushels of rubies. Pearls by the peck.

In one word: Golly!

Anyhow, there I was, holding a cigarette and wishing I had a match, when a big, happy looking fellow held out a tricky little gadget, touched a button and presto! there was flame.

"Thanks," I said, lighting up. "That's quite a lighter."

"You like it?" said the man, Carl Begemann of the American Safety Razor corporation. "Well, sir, you can have this lighter—"

"Gosh, thanks. But—"

"—For $5000," continued Begemann, looking even happier.

I didn't say anything. I couldn't.

"Of course," Begemann said, "This tray and that little urn go with it. All 14-carat gold. There are 36 diamonds and 24 rubies in the set. Just right for a Christmas stocking, wouldn't you say?"

This last remark was not aimed at me but at another gawker who at least looked as if he might have money, so I drifted away, puffing gingerly at the cigarette which had just had a $5000 light. It tasted like any other cigarette.

Then who should come along but a well-proportioned, brown-eyed blonde named Roma Paige, all decked out in a white nylon bathing suit with pearls dripping from every thread.

"Don't I look expensive?" she asked brightly. "You're supposed to guess how many pearls I'm wearing. If you guess right you win a magnum of champagne."

I guessed 2315 but that couldn't have been right because a woman's handbag I examined a few minutes later turned out to be covered by 14,000 pearls, and Miss Paige's swim suit was much larger than the handbag.

Well, a little larger, anyway.

"Actually," whispered Miss Theresa Jacobson, who was guarding the handbag, "there are only 13,999 pearls. Somebody dropped it and one pearl fell off.

"But there are 20 carats of diamonds and 30 carats of rubies and the setting is pure palladium."

"Gosh," I said. "And the—ah—price?"

Miss J. looked elaborately casual. "Twenty thousand dollars," she said. "It's the most expensive handbag in the world. We've sold three just like it—one each in Memphis, Miami and Los Angeles.

That did it.

If a woman can pay 20 perfectly good G's for a pearly old handbag that she'll probably leave behind in the movies someday, who says a $5000 lighter set is too good for uncle?

So as we were saying about that Christmas remembrance—

But don't let me know you're ordering it, will you? I want it to be a surprise.

The World Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

China's bloody civil war is rapidly approaching the grim crisis of a last-ditch stand by the nationalists against the onrushing communist forces.

The red steamroller from the north is moving steadily down against the great southern seaport of Canton, emergency capital of the nationalists. The communist army aiming at Canton already has captured the militarily important city of Tayu, 170 miles to the northeast.

Mackenzie

The seriousness of Canton's position is seen in the announcement of the United States embassy that it is moving to the British crown colony of Honk Kong, to the south. Report has it that the the communists plan to proclaim a government of China on October 10. That is China's Independence Day, anniversasary of the 1911 revolution which overthrew the Manchu dynasty. Every Chinese knows it as "double tenth" — the tenth day of the tenth month.

Speculation has it in Canton that when a red government is proclaimed it will receive immediate Russian recognition. The position of the vitally interested American and British governments hasn't been declared. Many observers have been expecting that they would act in concert.

So far as Washington is concerned, I understand the position is that if and when a communist government is formed in China, and it asks for recognition, the request will be considered.

Although the nationalists soon will be battling with backs to the wall, there is no indication that they are weakening in their determination to fight it out to the bitter end. The communists themselves have estimated that their opponents still have a million and a half troops in the field. Nationalist sources say that these forces are well equipped with small arms — the weapons mainly used in the war.

Chiang Still In

The key nationalist figure remains Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, despite the fact that he was withdrawn from the presidency and now holds only the position of leader of the majority political party. Chiang has his headquarters on the big island of Formosa, which is defended by 300,000 nationalist troops.

Thus in a sense Formosa is the real capital of nationalist China. In other words, there are two capitals, the official seat being in Canton for the moment. The guiding voice is that of the generalissimo.

I understand, by the way, the Madame Chiang Kai-shek, who for some time has been in America, is likely to return shortly to Formosa to join her husband. That would not be surprising, for throughout the long years of China's war she was the generalissimo's right hand. He is said to have leaned heavily on her guidance.

As the result of the red threat to Canton, the nationalist government already has started to move to the world war capital of Chungking. That ancient, wall-encircled city of half a million population is the commercial center of Szechwan province, an isolated agricultural area in west central China. It perches on a rocky mount beside the great Yangtze river.

Chungking is a tough place of abode, as I know from personal experience. However, it has the double virtue of being isolated from easy attack while at the same time having quick communication by air with the outside world. It's served the country well as capital during the world war, and should do the same for the nationalists.

Filbert Surplus Order Requested

PORTLAND, Aug. 20 (AP) — Filbert growers can be saved from heavy financial loss only if 30 per cent of the nut crop is declared surplus.

That was the testimony of John Trunk, manager of the Northwest Nut Growers, Dundee, at a department of agriculture hearing Thursday. Only 70 per cent of the crop should be put on the market, he said, to bolster prices.

The hearing is designed to get data on which to decide whether a federal marketing agrement should cover filberts.

The first opposition witness was Kenneth A. Brown, Gervais. His advice: "Sack the entire proposed program."

Letter From Washington

By Harris Ellsworth

The House of Representatives is just about ready to adjourn for this session. Remaining legislation on which it has not acted consists mostly of very large and controversial bills such as the socialized medicine bill and the Brannan farm plan. Such proposals will require weeks of hearings and long and complete debate on the floor of both houses of congress. There will be plenty of time for full and complete consideration of them next year. There will always be pending before any session of congress scores of non-controversial and minor bills. This session is no different from any other in that respect, but the house majority leadership properly takes the position that such legislation should be handled next year.

But the fact that the house has completed its work does not mean that congress can adjourn. The house must sit around and mark time until the senate is ready to stop talking and get its work done. Our solution to this problem will be to recess but continue in session technically until the senate is ready to adjourn the session.

* * *

The U. S. department of agriculture is apparently large enough for one of its bureaus to forget the existence of another. The forest service is charged with the task, among other things, of helping stabilize the lumber industry by stimulating new uses for wood products. The commodity credi corporation, in the same department, has charge of the grain storage and price support program.

Accordingly, the lumber industry in the Pacific Northwest is still wondering why the CCC, in its first call for bids on storage bins for Midwest corn, prepared specifications which required the use of all steel, thereby precluding the lumber and plywood makers from even a competitive chance at the business.

After strong protests from congressmen and the industry, the order was amended to include wooden bins but suppliers were given only ten days in which to prepare bids and get them to the nation's capital.

Incidentally, the CCC prepared its call for steel bins at a time when an industry-wide strike in the steel mills was expected; if that had happened, could the steel bins have ben erected by harvest time?

* * *

Considerable publicity has been given the passage by the house of a bill to increase the minimum wage law from 40 cents an hour to 75 cents an hour. Actually this bill, if it is passed by the senate and becomes law, will not be of much importance in Oregon so far as the rate per hour is concerned. People who are employed in our state are either working at much higher hourly rates or are doing work that is not involved in interstate commerce and hence not subject to regulation by congressional action. What we are mostly concerned with is the fact that the pending legislation serves to clarify and make specific the old "Wages and Hours" law. There has been some doubt as to which businesses are covered under the law and which are exempt. The bill passed by the house clearly spells out the matter of exemptions. I cannot give details of the bill here but will be glad to answer any inquiries or send a copy of the bill to anyone who wants one. A letter or postcard addressed to me at the House Office Building, Washington, D. C. will receive a prompt reply.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Bell's Palsy Affects Face

There are 12 nerves which come directly out of the brain. These nerves are numbered; for example, the seventh, also called the vacial nerve, supplies some of the skin and muscles of the face.

A condition which sometimes affects this nerve is called Bell's palsy after the famous Englishman who was the first to give a complete description of the condition.

The most striking features of this illness are a paralysis of the muscles of one side of the face which produces a drooping or sagging of the lip and an inability to close one eye. As a result, the two sides of the face do not look alike even when at rest; the difference becomes more conspicious when motions like wrinkling the forehead, smiling or laughing are attempted.

Bell's palsy frequently comes on suddenly and is associated with some pain. The pain may leave rather rapidly and then there may be no sensations except perhaps mild tingling. The sense of taste over the front portions of the tongue is also freqently affected.

Causes Vary Widely

This condition may be the result of injury such as a cut or a gunshot wound. The difficulty may follow the extraction of a tooth. Infections of various sorts, especially those in the upper part of the nose or throat, frequently precede this nerve paralysis. General diseases such as mumps, shingles, scariet fever, or influenza are additional possibilities.

Treatment depends on the cause if that can be discovered. In those varieties which follow an acute infection, time is perhaps all that is needed.

In other cases some special operation or treatment is indicated. The application of warmth around the ear area may be helpful. If the paralysis is slight and if there is nothing to make it seem undesirable, electric treatments may help. Active movements of the face in front of a mirror are recommended from the beginning.

TELLING THE EDITOR

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., (To the Editor)—Does anyone know of anybody lower than a chicken thief?

If so, let me know.

I purchased baby chicks in March, raising them with an electric brooder; going out in the cold night after night for weeks to see that they are all right; working days to buy feed, which was no small amount at the spring price of grain these days.

Now that the pullets are big enough to put in the laying house, some dirty, low-down skunk stole them.

This is written to warn other chicken raisers; lock your chicken house . . . before this happens to you.

Respectfully,
MRS. VANCE HUTCHINS.

Travel Heavy Through Area

Hotel and motel owners in the Klamath area are reporting an extra heavy load of out-of-state tourists here this month and especially this past week.

The major hotels in downtown Klamath Falls have been filled to capacity almost every night this month, with the week just ending one of the heaviest this year.

According to figures from the Klamath County chamber of commerce, August is always a heavy travel month, but indications are that this is one of the heaviest travel Augusts in the history of Klamath Falls.

And on the travel-out side, the World-Wide Travel bureau reports that travel out of Klamath is expected this month to double August, 1948. The bureau handles steamship, air, train, bus and other modes of transportation.

Poultrymen Name Boyington Chief

CORVALLIS, Aug. 20 (AP) — The Oregon Poultry Improvement association elected G. A. Boyington, Hood River, president at the annual meeting at Oregon State college Thursday. He succeeds Don Anchors, Grants Pass.

F. E. Fox and Richard Hanson, Corvallis; J. R. McRae, Milwaukie; Lloyd A. Lee, Salem, were elected to the board of directors. Holdover directors are Aschors and George Gilmore, Junction City.

The association agreed to discard pullorum controlled rating from the Oregon poultry improvement plan. This follows similar action in neighboring states.
