

Paint Will Help Keep Farm Value

Temperatures between 60 and 80 degrees are best for exterior painting, reminds an O.S.C. extension rural housing specialist, John C. Campbell, who adds that paint wrinkling may result if it is applied in the direct rays of the sun when the thermometer has climbed above 90 degrees.

At low temperatures—below 50 degrees—paint does not flow easily, bounces off, smooth but not glossy. Apply a good quality paint, thinned to the proper consistency and brushed out smoothly. Read the directions on the label and follow them carefully. Allow plenty of time for each coat to dry and apply the right number of coats. Usually several thin coats are better than one thick one.

Repaint old structures before the wood has begun to rot and nails have begun to rust, the housing specialist advises. Rotting and rusting will continue, he explains, after the paint has been applied. The longer painting is delayed the more difficult and expensive it becomes because of the extra time required in preparing the surface.

Principal causes of paint failures are neglect in properly preparing the surface, painting in damp or otherwise unfavorable weather, and using inferior paints.

Regardless of generally higher cost, quality paints are the best "bargains," Campbell believes. He adds that most ready mixed paints contain a white lead or white lead and zinc oxide pigment. Good paint is mixed with pure raw linseed oil, with 5 to 10 per cent Japan drier. The addition of gloss oil, resin oil, fish oil and mineral oil makes inferior paint.

Under surfaces must be clean when repainting, Campbell stresses. Paint will not cover such things as grease, oil, dust, loose dirt, soot or loose paint without future difficulty, he concludes.

Coughs In Cows May Be Danger Point

"Cover that cough, smother that sneeze" is not only good advice for people in public places. It has practical meaning in the cow barn too.

Danger that coughing cattle may spread respiratory infections to their stablemates is highlighted in a research report from the American.

The report describes an unusual case of tuberculosis of the eye in a heifer. A tuberculous cow with a bad cough, stanchioned next to the heifer, is believed to have spread the disease.

AVMA points out that this case occurred in England, where bovine tuberculosis is widespread. Although tuberculosis has been reduced to a minimum in United States herds, coughs and sneezers are nevertheless a menace because they may spread all kinds of respiratory infections. Isolation of any animal urged, therefore, to protect the rest of the herd.

During 1947, 1,500,000 trans-Atlantic passengers were carried to Great Britain by sea and air and the Southampton docks handled 577,000 passengers for an all-time record.
