

Variety Acts On Shrine Circus Bill

Generous variety in all categories of circus entertainment — animal, aerial, acrobatic and comedy — are found in the new 1949 edition of the Shrine-Polack Bros. Circus, which the Klamath Falls Shrine club will present Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 22, 23, and 24, at the Klamath Falls armory. Such is the promise of Loren Palmerston, Shrine Club president, and Clarence Humble, general chairman of the circus committee.

Spine-tingling aerial thrillers include the intrepid adagio teamwork aloft of the Rose Gould Trio, the imposing mid-air pageantry of the Seven Ward-Bell Flyers, high-wire adventures more breath-taking than ever by the augmented Berostini Troupe, and a refreshing new version of the aerial ballet, "Hoopla in the Sky."

Equally outstanding are the gravity-defying upside-down feats of Barton the Great, who specializes in standing on one finger; the spinning acrobatics of the Italian Bogino Family, the hilarious coverings of Natal the monkey-man, fun on wheels by the Four Cycling Sidneys, and unbelievable gymnastic contortions by the popular Chinese team, Chai and Somay.

SHRINE CIRCUS PARTNERS—Harry Dann, rated as circusdom's most photogenic clown, and his trained duck, Louie III, will be among the famous funsters with the Klamath Falls Shrine club-Polack Brothers circus to be seen in afternoon and night performances Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 22, 23 and 24, at the Klamath Falls armory.

Maybe There Just Isn't An 'Average American Citizen'!

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP)—You are always being told what you—"the average American citizen"—own, owe, make, spend and save. And, somehow, it never seems to fit your own case very well.

For instance, there are federal reserve board figures to show that Americans as a whole own more "liquid assets" than ever before—some $122 billion worth, compared with $45 billion before the war. But at the same time you are told that "the average spending unit" a family, had only $300 put away in liquid assets in 1948, whereas the year before it had $350, and in 1946 had $400.

Liquid assets are savings you can turn into cash easily when you need it, such as demand and time deposits in banks, savings and loan shares and United States government securities.

make you below average when it comes to compiling statistics.

Before you get too worried about the average holdings of liquid assets being lower now than in 1946, look at some other figures.

Savings Up

There are 536 mutual savings banks in the United States. Their total deposits are just under $19 billion, up from 10 1/3 billion just 19 years ago. There are more than 19 million depositors now, a gain of 3 1/2 million in 10 years. During the first seven months of this year, while every one was talking about the slump, deposits rose $588 million. The number of depositors increased by 339,000 this year.

At midyear Americans had $3 1/2 billion in postal savings and $56 billion in government savings bonds, more than ever before.

Or look at life insurance, not counted as a "liquid asset." In the first seven months of this year Americans bought policies with face value of $13 billion (although the premiums they paid in did not total that much, of course). This was $172 million more than purchased in the same period last year. Their total holdings at the start of this Average American?

The growth in total liquid assets and drop in average holdings becomes the more confusing when you are told that last year three million families used up their savings, but the same year as many or more started nest eggs for the first time. It all adds up to the suspicion that maybe there isn't any average American.

If you are one of the three million to have spent your liquid savings, you may have used them up when the cost of living was rising. But you may have put them into a home or other real estate or into starting a business. That scarcely makes you a spendthrift. It does

CIVIL SERVICE JOBS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP)—Californians are well in the lead among the states in federal civilian employment, the civil service commission said today. As of July 1 there were 202,572 federal civil service employees in the sunshine state out of an over-all U.S. total of 2,109,435, the agency said. U.S. civil service employment, by states includes Oregon, 17,035; and Washington 49,587.

year were 70 per cent above that they held in 1940.

Stock Trading

In the first six months of this year American individuals, banks and insurance companies paid an average of $63 million each month for new issues of corporate common stocks, $33 million for preferred stocks, and $452 1/2 million for corporate bonds and notes. The national industrial conference board says you have to go back to 1929 to find any monthly average like it—a monthly total of $538 1/2 million for corporate securities.

Individuals' time deposits in banks totalled $52 billion at the start of this year, compared with $24 billion ten years ago, the federal reserve board reports. Demand deposits topped $29 billion, against a little more than $7 billion ten years ago.

The department of commerce puts total personal income last year at $206 billion. That is the total paid out in wages, salaries, net income of unincorporated business, dividends, interest, rents, and benefits from social insurance and veterans' pensions.

The monthly peak was reached in December. Since then it has retreated, and the latest figures, for July, show personal income at an annual rate of just under $210 billion, a drop of $4.8 billion from July, 1948.

The department averages the 1948 total out at $1410 a person, a gain of 7 per cent over the previous year.

Chances are there were few persons who made exactly $1410. But if you are one of these rare individuals, that makes you the average American. How did you manage on that?

Arab Women Working For Emancipation

TUNIS (AP)—There are only a handful of Arab co-eds in all the universities of French North Africa and less than a dozen women in the medical and legal professions, yet in the few years since the war a slow emancipation has begun.

A nationalist leader (male) expressed the firm conviction here that in another two generations the veil for women will have completely disappeared. Already, with few exceptions, the Arab woman no longer shares her husband with other wives.

Women's suffrage movements have been organized everywhere except Spanish Morocco.

Real conditions of emancipation are restricted to the young and the wealthy, but they are spreading. One of the heroines of the feminists is the young daughter of the Sultan of Morocco, French-educated Princess Lalla Aicha, who carries out her liberal convictions not only by frequently appearing in public and being photographed without a veil, but by making addresses (she speaks English as well as French and Arabic) attacking "the false conceptions by which some try to limit the horizons of our women."

Perhaps for fear of alienating their potential following, none of the women's groups insists on their consider this an issue of secondary though the leaders set an example by going unveiled themselves. They importance, which will resolve itself in time.

Even the young feminists admit that the veil still serves its purpose as a "misery hider" behind which old women can conceal their ugliness and the poor can conceal their rags.

The question of who or what is guilty of keeping Moslem women in a subservient position is one which brings conflicting answers.
