CVA, Taft And Morse

By DEB ADDISON
YOU don't have to wear a stiff shirt to talk to Representative Lowell Stockman. He's just an Eastern Oregon boy who has made good; here and for us in Washington. All you have to do is stick out your mitt, and then tilt your head back to look him in the eye.

He chatted with us over a cup of coffee at The Herald and News, and here are some ideas we picked up from him. We're not directly quoting Stockman, but reporting impressions from the conversation.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S balk of reclamation and army engineers in the Columbia valley in favor of a Columbia Valley Authority will have the effect of stalling progress of these two agencies but he'll not get them.

SENATOR TAFT has the best mind, is the most able man in congress. Ohio is a good cross section of all types of voters. These voters won't turn Taft down. Ohio's Governor Lausche, democrat, is popular, and is a possible Taft opponent.

There's no one in Oregon (in either party) who could give Senator Morse a close race. Bill Walsh of Cook Bay is not likely to make the try in the primaries, but may back in the limelight of a "possible" for a while. Morse's horsey appearance at the state fair in Salem and subsequent spill and hospitalization is an example of his affinity for the headlines. Stockman, like Senator Cordon, is emphatic in naming Morse a good colleague, as never standing short on the call for any cooperation.

Sure I went to the Pelicans' opener Friday night, and it was a dilly of a football game. Reason for the loss as picked up from various experts: (1) poor coaching, (2) over-coached, (3) poor line play, (4) beautiful line play but bum backfield interference, (5) lack of condition, (6) over-trained. Take your choice. . . Huskies looking lad on the bench was Dr. Neil Black. . . Most fun at the game was had by small boys roaming the sidelines. They didn't have the KUHSE's worry over victory or defeat, nor the grownups' worry over missing a play. . . Frank Jenkins held forth Thursday and Friday on Herald and News people going on to Bigger and Better things; so did Hattie Friday in "They'll Do It Every Time."

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
PEOPLE lives by its assumptions, and a basic assumption of the American people is that this is a capitalist country. Capitalism is an economic philosophy best described by Adam Smith whose book appeared in 1776, the year of the Declaration of Independence.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Mentally Sick Truly Ill

By EDWIN F. JORDAN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service
Those who have a mental disease are just as truly ill as are those who have a broken bone, a tumor or some other trouble which can be seen or felt. In the not too distant past those who suffered from a mental disease were often kept in chains or solitary confinement, were beaten, and no effort was made to get at the bottom of the difficulty. Reform finally came in most places and the mentally ill came to be treated more humanely.

are being taught away from this basic assumption. Few of them are sufficiently courageous to declare themselves Marxists, and therefore talk around the subject; usually producing such a mixture of truth and falsehood that the student is left without a guiding philosophy. This confusion, the professors call liberalism: that is, an open-mindedness which never reaches conclusions and therefore never reaches maturity.

This phenomenon startled a lawyer, George S. Montgomery Jr., who listened to the conversation of the young. He describes this experience:

"Some time ago I found myself an observer in an informal discussion of modern economics, carried on by certain of my nephews and nieces and some of their contemporaries, all recent graduates or about to become graduates of various well-known American colleges. These young people were the products of parents and homes representative of reasonably prosperous business and professional families. The success achieved by their fathers and the comforts and education made available to them were the results of diligence and thrift over many years under the American capitalist system, to which the parents were wholeheartedly devoted. Orthodoxy was their most prominent characteristic.

"But the views expressed by these self-assured young Americans were so foreign to those of their parents and their forefathers that I have given the evening's colloquy a great deal of thought, study and research . . ."

Writes Book
S O he wrote a book, "The Return of Adam Smith," and it is a significant and valuable discussion of our current problems. Every American parent, who really cares about his children and his country, should read the book, and if his children are of college age, he should try to get them to read it. It will do them more good than much of the stuff they read for a degree.

There is one point in Montgomery's book that I should like to emphasize. I quote:

"I secured the latest American edition of 'The Wealth of Nations,' published by the 'Modern Library' in 1937. I discovered that this volume contained an introduction written by Professor Max Lerner, of Columbia university. I read this introduction. I saw a glimmering of light. There was a strange similarity between the facile words to which I had listened a few evenings before and the subtle phrases of Lerner. When I finished the introduction I was aware that Lerner had written, not an introduction to Adam Smith, but an invitation to Karl Marx. He provided an epitaph for Adam Smith. It was quite evident that Lerner intended Adam Smith to have no greater influence on the economic thought of American youth than has 'Piers Plowman' on its literary expression. Perhaps the publishers can explain how they came to select such a man to introduce Adam Smith to the American public."

Undermining Technique
THAT is the technique which is undermining America. Huey Long put it so wisely when he said that when fascism came to America, it would be called democracy. For instance, the program of the new political group, the ADA, is straight socialism, but they call it democracy. The Stalinists call their satellite countries, "people's democracies." So many who would destroy capitalism function as though they were capitalists. It is an era of masquerade, the assumption being, as Harry Hopkins is so often reported to have said, "the people are too dumb."

It is this intellectual arrogance which makes it possible for such a person as Leon Keyserling, sitting in the White House, to advocate the destruction of our economic system while giving the impression that he favors its preservation. Mrs. Roosevelt recently put that thought into words when she protested that she and her husband, during the wildest days of the New Deal, sought to preserve capitalism in the United States—sought to do it by establishing a mixed economy, the first step in Fabian socialism. Perhaps you will find the answer in "The Return of Adam Smith," by George S. Montgomery Jr.

too much. It does not always work, but it offers hope to many. Note: Dr. Jordan is unable to answer individual questions from readers. However, each day he will answer one of the most frequently asked questions in his column.

Suburban Firemen Busy Yesterday

The suburban fire department had an active Sunday with four fires reported, including one which was brought to the fire station. Dr. Wayne McAtee drove his car to the fire station at 3:55 p. m. when the emergency brake caught fire. The flame was quickly extinguished with damage only to the brake lining. At 10:45 a. m., an electric motor in the basement of the Broadway market, 4534 S. 6th, caught fire. Damage was confined to the motor. Two grass fires, neither of which did much damage, were extinguished by suburban firemen in the afternoon, one at Shasta way and Dayton and the other in the 4500 block on Washburn way.

BOYLE'S COLUMN

Successful Net Star Will Give Young Hopefuls Lift

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Everyone daydreams of going back to his old school as a famous success. Few do. The rainbow called renown eludes most of us. And many a graduate hesitates to visit his college in after years for fear the librarian will sandbag him for the $1.35 he still owes for keeping a book out too long.

But Eleanor Steber is going back to a happy homecoming this week to the New England conservatory of music in Boston. She went there first in the 1930's as a promising vocal student from Wheeling, W. Va. Her parents had been able to scrape together only $600 to finance her education.

A scholarship enabled her to remain at the $600 was gone, an Eleanor worked as a waitress to pay her other expenses. I doubt if there is such a gadget in existence, but sure do wish that there was. And I'll tell you why. It seems that I do my best work at night after I get off work. What happens is this. I go home, hop into bed, read a magazine for a while, turn out the lights, and hop back into bed. But can I go to sleep? Not on your life. For that's when the wheels start turning, and the thoughts transmitting. So I say to my inner self, "Now there's a good idea. Have to use that in tomorrow's Static."

idea. Have to go over the minor details with the boys at KFLW. It should be worth a cool million. . . But do you want to be let in on a secret as to how this bit of nonsense got into today's Static. Well, I hopped out of bed, got pencil and paper, and started writing. So boss, how's about paying overtime for all that work that I do after hours? Well, someone finally got the right answer. A Mr. Clarence Queening in Stamford, Conn., called the mystery tune as "Home, Daughter, Home," and won himself $23,000 worth of prizes ranging all the way from a $2500 diamond-studded wristwatch to a new automobile. Now the pot is down to a measly $13,500 worth of loot, and there is a new mystery tune. Who knows the answer to this one? Sure wish that I did. Could use a new car and a few extra knick-knacks.

Static

By DAVE UNDERHILL
Today is the start of my fourth week on the editorial staff of The Herald and News. And I have come to one conclusion. If I had $198 to spare I would spend it all to buy a "thought transmission recorder."

All of this gets me to thinking. Have you ever heard of those new record machines that you place by your bed at night. Attached to them is an earphone that is placed under your pillow. All you have to do is turn on the machine, hop into bed, go to sleep, and the next day you wake up all fresh and ready to pass that big test at school. Well, I am going to try and reverse that process by putting a microphone under my pillow, a blank record on the machine, and a record cutting needle in place of the playing type. Presto, a thought transmission recorder! You know that sounds like a good idea.

Now comes the struggle between the flesh and the intellect. It's either get out of bed, turn on the lights and try to jot those fleeting thoughts down on paper. Or else you say to heck with it, pound the pillow and try to sleep. All of this gets me to thinking. Have you ever heard of those new record machines that you place by your bed at night. The World Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The urgency of concluding a Japanese treaty has developed the startling possibility that the democracies may get ahead with the job without Russia, unless a quick solution of the disagreement with Moscow can be found.

Should this happen it would of course mean two distinct treaties—another stone added to the wall dividing the totalitarian states and the democracies.

The stalemate hinges on Russia's insistence that the treaty be concluded by the Big Four foreign ministers council (America, Britain, Russia and France), whereas the United States and Britain insist that it be handled by the Far Eastern commission. This commission comprises the 11 countries that fought against Japan—the United States, Russia, Britain, France, China, the Philippines, The Netherlands, Canada, Australia, India and New Zealand.

The Russian attitude may be explained largely by the fact that the veto is permitted in council proceedings, whereas it is not used in the commission.

On one thing there appears to be unanimity—the need of getting ahead with the job.

The necessity of early action was emphasized recently by General MacArthur for the second time.

On top of that the conversations in Washington last week between British Foreign Secretary Bevin and Secretary of State Acheson reached the conclusion that a Japanese treaty is long overdue.

And Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky, who is heading the Russian delegation to the new United Nations meeting opening tomorrow at Lake Success, is expected to press for a Japanese treaty—to be made by the foreign ministers council.

Secretary Acheson has indicated that Britain and the United States may try again to end the two-year old deadlock over who should draft the treaty. And what if his effort fails? As the signs now read, the question then will arise whether the allies represented on the Far Eastern commission, headed by America and Britain, shall go ahead and make a treaty with Japan without Russia. Certainly Washington and London can't be expected to agree that Far Eastern countries like Australia and the Philippines, which had more to do with the Japanese war than did Russia, shall be left out of the treaty making.

COURT WIZARDRY

To the Editor—About a year ago you were kind enough to publish some open letters of mine to the county court concerning the poor conditions of the roads in Langell valley. At the same time, the ladies of that community were waiting in a delegation upon the court. Their actions and my gentle letters have stimulated the court to live up to their election promises and they have made a good start on dealing equitably with that community by giving them paved roads for the distance promised.

It is not unusual for a taxpayer to thank his officials for equitably and wisely spending the tax money. Perhaps it would be better if more of us did. I wish, however, to thank the county court for their action of the past year, and I hope they will be good enough to continue to carry out their promised program for the next two or three years. You will not, I am sure, use your editorial pencil to delete these following lines. In their newspaper reply to my letters a year ago, they proved beyond the shadow of doubt—to their own satisfaction—that they could not possibly find the money to pave Langell valley roads. But wonder upon wonder, somewhere, somehow by financial legerdemain, they have brought out of the hat large quantities of black top. We do not know how they did it, but we are grateful to them, and we hope they will continue their wizardry.

Very sincerely yours, J. HENRY THOMAS.

More KF Students Pledged At UO

Pledge lists from the fraternity and sorority fall rushing at the University of Oregon include Marilyn Olson, Delta Zeta; Phillip McGillivray, pledged Delta Upsilon; Jerry Taylor, Phi Kappa Psi; Rex Valentine, Phi Sigma Kappa, and George Zupan, Theta Chi.

An earlier list of pledges appeared in Saturday's paper. Sixteen Klamath Falls students were pledged at the end of last week's rushing.

Iodized Salt Use Pushed

By FRANK CAREY
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—The government wants every salt shaker in the nation filled with "iodized salt."

"That's ordinary table salt with a little iodine added to it. Government and other authorities have just announced a new program to encourage its use. They contend this will give the average person enough iodine to:

- 1. Help prevent one of the commonest forms of goiter.
2. Help fortify the people's health generally—because iodine is an essential food element and some folks don't get enough of it from their regular food.

Iodized salt is not new. As early as 1831 its use was suggested to prevent goiter. Over the years various health groups have advocated its use. Now the government, the medical profession, public health authorities and the salt industry have joined to attempt to get everyone to use it.

Dr. W. H. Sebrell of the National Institute of Health (NIH) says in an article in "Public Health Reports": "Many people who take vitamin tablets and are careful about getting an adequate supply of vitamins neglect the iodized salt which will insure a health minimum of iodine for the normal person."

Sebrell is director of NIH's Institute of experimental biology and medicine. He says that it has been shown many times in this country and abroad that "iodine deficiency is easily corrected and better health achieved through the daily routine use of a table salt to which tiny amounts of iodine have been added by the manufacturer."

Cheap, Pure This salt is just as pure as ordinary salt, he says, just as cheap, and tastes no different. (Caution: Iodized salt is not suggested as the answer to all nutritional needs. You have to have other essential elements in your food—iron, calcium, copper and many others. Iodized salt is a handy way of getting enough iodine, but only iodine.)

Why is iodine so essential a nutrient? In your neck is a gland called the thyroid. It produces a "hormone"—or chemical messenger—that is carried by the blood stream. This hormone controls the rate of heat production in your body. It aids in stimulating the normal growth of bones, hair and skin. It helps the normal development of the brain, helps stimulate sexual development at the age of puberty. It helps in the maintenance of a normal pregnancy. And it aids in the production of an adequate milk supply for nursing mothers.

If the gland doesn't get enough iodine, it doesn't function properly. One possible result of such iodine starvation is the disease called "simple goiter." One form of "toxic (poisonous) goiter" may result as a complication of simple goiter. Simple goiter is an enlargement of the thyroid gland. The gland, in trying to produce hormone without sufficient iodine, literally overstrains itself and gets large.
