The answers to everyday insurance problems*
By Jerry Thomas

QUESTION: While on a fishing trip last fall, I was fly casting and accidentally snagged a friend in the back of the neck. The hook had to be cut out and though the wound was painful, it wasn't at first serious. Later, however, it became infected and as I insisted on footing the medical bills, I paid dearly for my carelessness. I've been told that there is a form of insurance which covers this sort of accident and I would like to learn just what it is and how expensive it is.

ANSWER: The insurance coverage to which you refer is given by a Comprehensive Personal Liability policy. The premium is very small and the policy covers your own legal liability and that of your wife and all minor children. Injuries caused by sports accidents are specifically covered.
