Chrysler's first post-war station wagon, a 9-passenger Royal model, combines beauty with utility. The white ash trim provides a pleasing effect in contrast with the mahogany paneling, which really is metal that has been processed to resemble the grained wood. The spare tire is easily accessible in a special compartment built into the tail gate. With the center and rear seats removed and the tail gate down, nearly 10 feet of loading space is available. The seats are upholstered in a leather-like plastic that resembles alligator hide and is easily cleaned with soap and water. The Chrysler station wagon is available in three body colors.

SOUTHWEST'S QUAIL GET TO IDAHO
BOISE, Ida. (AP) — Idaho has some unusual visitors from the deserts of the Southwest. They are gambel quail. State Bird Supervisor Maurice Lundy wonders how the plump, fat desert birds got so far from their normal range. He says they are supposed to be non-migratory and are not native to Idaho.

Five coveys of 123 gambels were reported in the Lemhi drainage and others were said to have been seen in Owyhee county. The birds provide some of the best shooting in the extreme Southwest. The Idaho game department hopes that those in this state will stay and multiply.

Chiloquin

The Blue Birds of Mrs. Dwight Sowers group the Willing Workers, and the Happy Blue Birds led by Mrs. Ralph McNitt have been selling boxes of assorted cards. All the money received from the sales of cards is to be used within the two groups to purchase needed supplies and materials. The 26 boxes of cards were given to the Blue Birds by Mrs. Friedman Kirk, whose Camp Fire group has disbanded.
