City, County Pokeys Have Empty Rooms

City and county jail officials were wondering today if they should hang up "rooms-for-rent" signs. The intake of guests at the two "Grey Bar hotels" has been very slow during the past month. Desk Sergeant Walter Thorne remarked that things at the city jail just aren't like the good old days. "Why, I can remember when the drunk tank has been full to saturation point," said the sergeant. "Of course," Thorne said with a smile, "that was before hair oil went up in price." Right now the city clink has only 12 semi-permanent guests. It is equipped to sleep 28, and also has space for a similar number in its hangover harbor. The county institution is also feeling the pinch. Their guest register indicated a total of 19 non-paying guests. Of course there are days when all 38 apartments are fully occupied. That condition exists about three times a year when immigration officials are making a roundup of Mexicans for shipment south of the border.
