Grateful Friend and Patient Writes Letter to His Doctor

By FRANK TRIPP

Dear Doctor: Fanny asked me, "Have you written Doctor Booth yet?" Sheepishly, I admitted, "No, I haven't."

"Where do you think your heart is?" I put my hand near my lower left rib. You hauled off and poked me a smart wallop just below the collar bone. It was no love tap.

"Your heart's up there," you said "and you've got the heart of an ox. Get a bottle of rhubarb and soda and quit trying to eat out the town."

"How much do I owe you?" I asked and you said: "Nothing. I don't want it on record that I ever prolonged the life of a newspaperman."

I got the rhubarb and soda and my gas pains stopped. You could have shook me down good then. I was scared.

Life Saved Then, doctor, there were two other times. And for those I have always loved you as much as one man could love another. Twice you saved the life of my pal—the girl who's been my sweetheart from childhood.

You'll pardon me, doctor, but it wouldn't be printable uncensored here. Close enough, it was: "Damn it to hell, Lande, thank God that's done—and well. Now look here, the next time you assist me don't you ever—"

Doctors everywhere and great surgeons like you have scattered in their realms. Just as grateful hearts as mine. What a pity more folks don't put their gratitude into words as I have tried to do.

Here's a true story about a Brown Swiss herd sire that's all bull. His name is Lauretta's Barbetta, J. B. 44389, and the animal before its death was owned by Albert Meier and Son, Beaverton.

H. P. Ewalt, OSC extension dairy specialist, says the most recent proving of the productive ability of this outstanding herd sire's daughters gives 15 daughters with an average of 13,573 pounds of milk having 576 pounds of butterfat.

Turkey Price Setup Mixed

The price outlook for turkeys this fall is a mixed one. C. W. Norton, manager of the Northwest Poultry and Dairy Products company, told some 175 turkey growers who attended the tenth annual meeting of the Oregon Turkey Improvement Association at OSC.

Despite the large turkey crop this year, Norton believes there will be a gradual price rise as the Thanksgiving market approaches. He thinks the holiday market in general will bring 45 to 47 cents net to growers.

Disturbing Factors Disturbing factors, however, are the threatened large-scale strikes in the East and the uncertainty caused by devaluing the English pound sterling and the Canadian dollar.

Judging Changed Program changes at the Pacific International Livestock Exposition in North Portland, October 7-15 have substituted these new judging date: Jersey, Herefords and Hereford steers, Monday, October 10;
