October 15 has been set for the Grange Booster night program of the East Side Grange. It has been announced by Fairy Hamersley, lecturer. All grangers and their invited guests may attend. This is the one night that every granger looks for each year—"the night of nights!" Why?

Every grange is judged largely by the quality of its booster-night, socially. All the life, pep, vim and willingness, punch and go the organization has comes out on booster night for it has guests and prospective members to entertain and show a good time. The social pulse of grange-life is set in motion for the coming year on booster night and every member who has the sincere interest, of the grange at heart wants to see booster night made a big success.

The event will begin at 8 o'clock with a short open meeting, a good program then follows. After the program a big potluck supper will be served climaxed by a social evening of dancing and general merriment.

The Happy Hour club met on Tuesday afternoon, October 4, at the home of Mrs. Amy Cloud. Thirteen members and five children were present. During the business meeting the president, Myrna Barrows, appointed the committees for the Christmas entertainment. The hostess gave a most interesting quiz on "last lines" in which first prize went to Eunice Cogburn and second prize to Gladys Porter. Refreshments were served consisting of pineapple-cheese salad with wafers and coffee. After a most delightful time the members dispersed to meet again in two weeks, on Tuesday, October 18 at the home of Gladys Porter, Alice Allen being the next hostess.

Mrs. Washington Hughes of Roseburg, granddaughter of E. C. Mason, first judge of Lake county, visited here a few hours last Wednesday. Mrs. Hughes was quite interested in the changes of the little town of her birth, having been raised here as a girl and left about 40 years ago. Her father built the house where Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Johnston live with Johnston's father, Lee Johnston. When she left here a little dirt road turned west at their home and at the corner where Ernest Robnett now lives it turned south again. That was the highway. The Johnston home was Mason's ranchhouse and he owned nearly all the property south of the state line from the foot hills to the lake. As shown on many deeds and abstracts Mason owned other property on the Oregon side of the town also. Mrs. Hughes visited the grave of her grandfather.

Mrs. Sally Garvin left Wednesday for Las Vegas after visiting here a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Frankie Williams. She will spend the winter in Las Vegas visiting with her son, Dan Garvin.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hallett from Oakland, Calif. arrived a few days ago to visit with Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Cooper and Mr. and Mrs. John Penhall. Jimmy Cooper and family have been away on a vacation to Oakland and up the coast unbeknownst to the Halletts. However, the Coopers returned Tuesday while the Halletts were still here and got to visit with them.

Among the freaks in the deer family can be listed the buck that was shot without aiming by Henry Cook, veteran hunter of New Pine Creek. The buck which was apparently an old one but rather small, had a couple of rosettes for antlers. The rosettes which were supposed to be antlers stood about 4 inches high, resembling somewhat a couple of pronged, flat summer squashes with six stubby points. Cook was hunting on the Kelly Creek Summit early the opening morning and the needless animal came up to where he was sitting on a ledge not more than 10 feet away. It was thus he was able to identify the deer as a buck. He just pointed the gun from his waist and fired. The deer went down and Verle Cook who was close by fired a mercy shot with his pistol when he approached the still struggling, freakishly horned buck.
