Social Security Benefit

By DEB ADDISON

HAVING just waded through a long article on social security in one of the city papers, it would be miserly not to pass along some of the reassuring information.

ADDISON

Number one reassuring fact is that you don't have to die, after all, to enjoy the benefits of social security. But that's getting the cart ahead of the hearse.

The government has all the money that has been dropped out of your and my pay checks each week since January 1, 1937. Or at least the govt. had eleven billion three hundred ten million of it last June. It's supposed to be in a trust fund that the govt. has loaned to the govt. Also, the govt. pays the govt. interest on the loan of this tidy sum.

• • • •

ANYWAY, to get in on the benefits of social security you don't have to die. You do have to speak up and present your case though. The govt. has your money but it doesn't know who you are or where you are. You're just a number.

You don't have to take anybody's word for this. You can test it out. Just walk in to the nearest social security field office (Federal building, K.F.) and get a yellow post card addressed to the social security administration in Baltimore, fill it out with your number, mail it, and you'll get back a statement of the wages recorded in your account.

• • • •

IF you don't want to die to get the benefits of social security, you'll have to hurry up and be 65 years of age. Having attained that age, the next thing you have to do is prove it. Most persons, having attained 65 winters without dying, could present themselves and be accepted as prima-facie evidence of the fact, but not by the govt.

(And not Bert Hall. They'd tell him to go back to work. Or to go to work.)

A birth certificate is evidence. Baptismal certificates are evidence. And naturalization, immigration, vaccination papers are evidence . . . and even drivers' licenses are evidence. So you should be all right on that score.

• • • •

HAVING established that you're alive and kicking and over 65, the next thing you do is prove that you don't have an income of over $15 a month. If you do have, you should have forgotten all about that social security money in the first place and saved yourself all that trouble; you're not eligible.

NOT having an income of over $15 a month, though, should be refreshing after 65 years of trying to HAVE an income of over $15 a month, so let's pass that over.

• • • •

SO all you have to do is fill these requirements, prove them, ask for social security benefits—and you're in. You'll get $25.35 a month from the govt. for the rest of the months that you inhabit this vale of wrath and tears.

At least that's the average amount that is being received at this time. You can get up to $85 a month, depending upon having a wife over 65 with enough children under 18.

• • • •

THERE'S still more hope, though, because pending legislation would boost the maximum for a retired worker to $64 a month and for the right kind of a family to $150 a month.

This same pending legislation also would take two cents out of each of your dollars, instead of the one cent the govt. takes. (Likewise for whoever signs your checks; and that will come from you, the consumer, in the long run, too.)

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

THE senate will, at this session, be dealing with the Johnston-Langer act to readjust postal rates. Should this bill pass, it will have an immediate and significant effect upon newspapers and magazines, increasing the cost of some, giving an unfair advantage to others, and putting not a few out of business. Many newspapers circulate without much benefit of the mails and therefore they do not take this legislation seriously. Magazines are not so fortunately situated.

The post office is a mismanaged enterprise and as the Hoover report has so clearly stated:

"A. The administrative structure is obsolete and over-centralized.

"B. A maze of out-moded laws, regulations, and traditions freezes progress and stifles proper administration.

"C. Although the post office is a business-type establishment, it lacks the freedom and flexibility essential to good business operation.

"D. Rates have not kept pace with wages and other costs, and rate-making machinery is inadequate.

"E. The service is used to hide subsidies."

It runs at a loss but has no system of cost accounting and therefore does not know exactly where the loss is earned. On this subject, the Hoover report says:

"The present system does not permit of competent cost accounting fundamental to efficient management of a business. It is outrageously cumbersome and results in a mass of unnecessary red tape and a host of employees."

• • • •

THE Johnston-Langer bill is designed to reduce the loss, but it does not do it by modernization of operations or by increased efficiencies but by increasing mail rates, particularly on second class mail which handles newspapers and magazines. The bill is exceedingly complicated but it, like so much else these days, is aimed at making the successful, unsuccessful; the competent, failures.

It provides that any publication, ". . . having over 85 per centum advertising in more than one-half of its issues during any twelve-month period shall be subject to revocation of the second-class mailing privileges."

• • • •

THIS comes from a former act and is nonsensical because it does not apply—no general publication would have 85 per cent of it as advertising in any issue. However, an exception is made of the "Official Guide of Railways and Steam Navigation Lines," published by the National Railway Publishing company, a private concern which already enjoys a monopoly in its field.

Also the following publications are given an advantageous rate:

". . . Publications maintained by and in the interests of religious, educational, scientific, philanthropic, agricultural, labor, or fraternal organizations or associations, not organized for profit and none of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual . . ."

Another exception is for weekly newspapers having a total circulation not exceeding 5000 and dailies not exceeding 10,000. What happens to competitive newspapers for farm circulation out of two neighboring towns, if one newspaper, having supplied better copy has a circulation of 12,000 and the poorer one a circulation of 7500? The better paper, the one whose editor showed initiative, competence, ability is penalized for these qualities. It sounds foolish but it is in the act on page 23.

Also certain newspapers are to be continued to be serviced by the post office free within the county of publication, a free service that can have no justification from either the standpoint of public welfare or the efficiency of the post office. It is just graft.

• • • •

THE Curtis Publishing company publishes "The Ladies Home Journal," "The Saturday Evening Post," "Holiday" and "Country Gentleman." The latter is a so-called agricultural magazine. Therefore, its rate ought to be, according to the act, lower than the others. No one can explain the reason, for obviously farmers read the general magazines the same as other Americans do. Why a so-called farm publication should have an advantage over any other type is beyond reason or justification but it is in the bill.

This is no way to reorganize the post office, by piecemeal legislation. The post office could be made more efficient by adopting the Hoover recommendations.

Jeweled Cigaret Lighter $5000; Matches Still Free

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—In a world of free matches Americans are forking out $50,000,000 annually for gadgets to light their cigarets.

The first World War popularized the wrist watch. And what that war did for the wrist watch the second World War has done for the cigaret lighter.

"Now the flint business alone is bigger than the entire lighter industry 15 years ago," said Alfred R. Nathan, vice president of the Ronson Art Metal Works.

Hal Boyle

The Ronson company — the equivalent of General Motors in its field — soon will market its 35,000,000th lighter.

Maroon Passion

It was founded 56 years ago by the late Louis V. Aronson, a metallurgical engineer who put the voice in the mama doll. Aronson, who died in 1940, was a pink-cheeked man with a passion for moroon—he even wore maroon shirts.

"Oddly, as a young man he once won a $5000 prize from the Belgian government for developing a safety match," Nathan recalled.

Repenting of this, Aronson turned to the mechanical lighter. His biggest contribution was a push button invention that brought the light to life with the pressure of a finger. It made him so much money he could pal around with kings. He even bought a 70-foot yacht so he could sail to see them.

Bathroom Lighter

"He had lighters from one end of the yacht to the other," said Nathan. "Even had one in his bathroom."

One of Nathan's present vice presidential duties is the assembling of a museum of mechanical lighters.

"In the early years they put lighters in everything from sword canes to baby shoes cast in bronze," he said.

This rococo period is dying out. The Ronson company, for example has cut down its number of models from 1000 to about 100.

"The thing was just getting out of hand," Nathan said.

Lighter Will

In his museum collections are a number sent by grateful soldiers who said the lighters saved their lives by stopping flak, shell fragments or bullets. One soldier scratched his will on his lighter, "I leave everything to brother Jim," and Nathan said the will was held valid.

"We don't want to make any odious comparisons," remarked Nathan, indicating the match industry couldn't understand that one either.

"But people like to be modern. A lighter is modern, and people feel less awkward using them than they do matches. That's our belief anyway."

How about a lifetime lighter that will never need refueling? Nathan looked cautious.

"Maybe one will come along that will last a year without refueling," he said, "but not a lifetime—in our lifetime."

The World Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The Red purge which is sweeping Czechoslovakia is further proof — if more were needed — of Moscow's determination to establish world communism, and of the tremendous efficiency of the machine which backs that determination.

The communist government in Prague, which grew out of the Russian military occupation at the end of the war, from the outset has encountered widespread resistance. Ineffective efforts by the authorities to bring recalcitrant citizens into line finally have resulted in a wholesale purge. This is described in news dispatches as creating a fear bordering on hysteria among the population.

Mackenzie

By day and by night people are being arrested, and many of them reportedly are being sent to prisons or labor camps. The drive is said to be mainly against the propertied class, and businesses are being confiscated. The chief causes of this upheaval are threefold:

1. The intense fervor of the people as a whole for their democracy, and their refusal to surrender their nationalism to Moscow.

2. The opposition of landowners and big business to nationalization.

3. The bitter clash between atheistic communism and a highly religious population, some 75 per cent of which is Catholic.

Stiff Pride

In order to get the full significance of what is happening you must have experienced the tremendous pride of the Czechoslovaks in their new republic, which was born at the Versailles out of the first global war to make the world "safe for democracy." I was present at the birth in 1919, and a year later spent some weeks in the new Czechoslovakia.

Then, less than a generation later, came the second World War which resulted in the Rustan occupation of Czechoslovakia and the inevitable inauguration of a communist regime. This creation of a Red government saw President Eduard Benes, one of the founders of Czechoslovakia, die of a broken heart. It saw Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk, son of the father of his country, die in an unexplained fall from a high window in his Prague apartment.

Fear, Distrust

All these circumstances created fear and distrust among the citizens. As time went on this dissatisfaction intensified and grew into outright resistance in many quarters.

The fight between the communists and the Catholic church became bitter.

Naturally the question arises whether the fiercely independent general public will stand for this before you can answer that query you have to answer another one: whether it likes it or not, what can the public do about it, with communist police and military in the saddle?

Obviously we must wait to see.

Colt Bemoans Portland's Culture Loss

PORTLAND, Oct. 13 (AP) — Art Museum Director Thomas C. Colt Jr., warned Portlanders yesterday that the city may be heading for "an eventual cultural eclipse."

He said in his annual report that "Portland is today the only metropolis of its size in the United States that does not contribute from the public funds to its art museum."

Colt also fired another volley in the battle with the Oregon Society of Artists. They staged an outdoor show this summer when Colt refused members the customary hanging of at least one product of their art. The society protested his selections favored modern works.

"An art museum is either an educational are institution or a world fair," declared Colt. "It must either exercise selection in what it shows, or show everything."

Handicapped Likely to Make Better Workers, Voters Say

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N. J.—Physically handicapped people are likely to make better workers than those not handicapped, in the opinion of a large majority of persons interviewed on the subject in a nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The survey, which was made in conjunction with National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, October 2-8, showed that favorable regard for physically handicapped workers is widespread through all occupation groups.

Gallup

Here is the result of the survey:

"In general, do you think a physically handicapped (disabled) person in a suitable job is likely to be a better worker or a poorer worker than a person who is not handicapped?"

Better	66%
Poorer	7
About the same	22
No opinion	5

• • •

Most Would Hire Them

A companion question in the survey approached the subject in a somewhat different way, as follows:

"If you were an employer—say, in a factory—would you have any objections to hiring a person who was physically handicapped (disabled), but otherwise qualified for the job?"

The vote:

Yes, would have objections	10%
No, would have no objections	88
No opinion	2

• • •

Presidential Committee

A committe to promote the hiring of physically handicapped workers was appointed by President Truman, with Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, White House physician from 1933 to 1945, as chairman. State commissioners joined in proclaiming Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, which had the backing of many business organizations, including the National Association of Manufacturers and the U.S. chamber of commerce.

The chamber of commerce at its annual meeting last May went on reord urging employers to give widest possible job placement to the physically handicapped.

The National Association of Manufacturers conducted a survey among 300 manufacturing companies in 35 states to determine what their policies are in the hiring of disabled persons.

No Arbitrary Regulations

It was found that the majority of employers have no arbitrary regulations on the employment of physically handicapped people.

A report from a chemical company summed up the company attitude this way:

"When a handicapped person is able to perform the duties of a job, he is no longer handicapped, so far as that job is concerned."

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Stomach Ulcers Need Checking

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.

Ulcers of the stomach are extremely common and seem to be increasing. Some believe that this is because of the strain of modern living. Although it is true that there is probably more excitement and wear and tear on the nervous system brought about by noise, automobiles, speed and the like, than there was 50 years ago, this point is difficult to prove.

Ulcers occur both in the stomach itself and in the duodenum, which is that portion of the intestine into whih the stomach empties. The ulcer starts as a small defect in the lining of the stomach or mucous membrane, and becomes deeper and larger around as it develops. Eventually it may become deep enough to reach the tiny nerve endings which carry pain sensation to the brain.

Common Purpose

All treatments for ulcer have the common purpose of relieving the irritation on its surface, that is in the stomach or duodenum, so that the ulcer has a chance to heal. The most irritating substances which come in contact with the ulcer is the hydrochloric acid manufactured by the stomach itself.

In addition to the pain and distress of the ulcer there are two serious complications. When an ulcer eats across a small blood vessel, bleeding takes place. Sometimes this is slow and the blood merely passes down the intestinal tract. At other times the bleeding may be rapid, fill the stomach and cause vomiting. In either case bleeding is a sign requiring prompt and serious attention.

The other complication is perforation — the ulcer eats entirely through the mucous membrane and wall of the stomach and makes a hole into the abdominal cavity. This raises the danger of peritonitis and a prompt operation is necessary.

The Doctor Answers

QUESTION: A boy 6 years old bites his fingernails and toenails until they fester. What can I do to stop it?

ANSWER: This is probably a nervous reaction. The only thing that can be done is to try to find out why the child is so nervous.

The old crystal ball sure took a beating this past week-end. In all, 55 gallons of gas, two tires, and two tubes were given away by the Mobile gas people.

First place winner in the weekly football prognostication contest was Earl Zacharias, 622½ Lowell street. Earl had eleven winners, four losers, and was 315 points off in total scores.

In second place came Donald Widby, 2247 S. 6th street, with a similar number of wins and losses, but a score total of 326.

Five other local contestants outguessed the crystal ball — who in real life is Floyd Wynne — and received five gallons of gas for their efforts.

S-R-O are three letters that to most people designate "Standing Room Only."

In this part of the country, however, the letters have a different connotation. They mean, "Sprague River, Oregon."

So to all you curious people who have been calling me in the past couple of days and asking me what the three little letters mean on a local request program, there is your answer.

Dave Underhill

To be truthful, for a while I was convinced that they had the first meaning. But when I started getting so many queries, I asked Floyd Wynne, just what the scoop was.

Incidentally, I don't mind getting phone calls during the course of the evening. It kind of makes a break in the routine.

But I always like to know to whom I am talking. It makes things so much more chummy, when you know who is on the other end of the line.

Last night at quitting time, I got a call from some unidentified person. The anonymous person persisted in talking, but wouldn't give out with a name. The whole situation rather irked me.

Say, have you seen this week's cover picture on the Saturday Evening Post.

I brought a copy of the Post into the office this afternoon, and everyone got a large charge out of the picture.

I sure do miss your friendly chitchat and good humor, Mrs. Wade. So hurry up and get well, and I will buy the next ice cream cone.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

But Curly "Knows What The Score Is!"

Was over at Doc Sherman's drug store listening to the World Series on the radio. Curly Lawson wanders in and says: "How about a chocolate malted, Doc?"

"Sorry, Curly," says Doc, "can't make you a malted for a while yet." "What's the idea?" Curly asks. "Well," says Doc, "most of the folks want to hear the game and the mixer makes too much noise." Curly thinks a moment and says, "Okay with me, Doc—I'll take a chocolate soda!"

This shows how tolerant folks can be. Doc showed his respect for how the majority felt; Curly was big enough not to insist on his malted even though he doesn't happen to be fond of baseball.

From where I sit, willingness to respect the other people's feelings is important in a Democracy. If we're tolerant of a person's like for baseball or a glass of temperate beer, we've come a long way on the right road . . . the road to a better America, that is!
