

Canasta Has Rival Game, 'Challenge'

By MARK BARRON.
 NEW YORK (AP)—During the war there were a lot of fellows who heard about the fabulous John Scarne, but none of us were ever able to find him. In the late hours of pay day night, the fellows with empty pockets would lie in the darkness of their barracks and bitterly discuss the fact that it was always the same two or three guys in the outfit who won the money in the dice and poker games which began shortly after payroll call had sounded.

Fascinating
 John Scarne turned up the other day with a fascinating game called Challenge which can be played either against opponents or as a solitaire game. And it turned up John Scarne in the public eye at long last. During the war Scarne was consultant to the war department on gambling among members of the armed forces. It seems the army and navy wanted to keep the soldiers and sailors from getting fazed by professional gamblers, and especially by crooked gamblers.

So for months Scarne was constantly being transferred as a soldier from one company to another, as a sailor from one ship to another. His orders were to join in the games, put the finger on crooked gamblers, then be transferred from the outfit to another outfit without revealing his identity.

No Gambler
 Scarne is no gambler himself. He studies games, and especially games in which one can win or lose money, with the same aim of a scientist studying the wherefore and why of the atom bomb. He has had two books published, "Scarne on Cards" and "Scarne on Dice." They outline the odds of your chances, how to detect cheating and your own chances to win. Much of his advice was published in "Yank," the army magazine during the war, as counsel to soldiers and the odds they were up against if they wanted to take a chance with cards or dice.

THE KIDS CELEBRATED today at Klamath Union high school with a big assembly at 8.30 to rejoice over the win over Medford. Four of the celebrants are members of the Little Men's Marching and Chowder Society which made its first formal appearance in the rally last Friday. They are the men behind the clock at the Modoc field games. Left to right, Marvin Nerse, Angus Stewart, John Oliver and Douglas Leichty. There was quite a scrounge to obtain the black umbrellas, ancient affairs finally located by Mr. Oliver.

His new game of Challenge, which took him eleven years to create and which is now rivaling Canasta for popularity in the Broadway backstage rooms, is one which he claims even an expert like himself cannot master. Challenge is a game of squares, resembling but not a duplicate of a checker board. The idea is to maneuver the num-

Hunters Scan Skies As Ducks Fly

By BILL JENKINS

THIS morning is a tragic one. Nothing in the mail that could possibly be stretched to cover column material. Monday morning is blue indeed when you winnow through a four foot stack of letters and brochures and find nothing of interest. Maybe the afternoon delivery will be better.

SEEMS I'll have to eat my words (spoken some days ago) that it's nice all week and cloudy on Sunday. Yesterday was just about as nice a day as you could want. But somehow I don't seem to have the energy to do much work on Sunday. At least the lawn mowing season seems to be pretty well over.

ON the subject of lawns, I thought mine was a bit dry yesterday, so turned on the sprinklers to wet it down.

bered discs in their numerical sequence within a time limit and within a limited number of moves.

Starts INSTANTLY to relieve SORE THROAT

Caused by Colds
 Just rub on Mustersole... it's made especially to promptly relieve coughs, sore throat and aching chest muscles due to colds. Mustersole actually helps break up local congestion in the upper bronchial tract, nose and throat. In 3 strengths.

Let them run all night and this morning had as pretty a covering of ice on the lawn as you could want to see. Maybe summer is over.

WITH duck season less than a week off now, the eyes of most hunters are turning skyward more and more often. The old mallard drakes are out of their summer moult and back in full color again. Pintails are starting to be seen in increasing numbers in places other than the barley fields—and the bluebird weather stays.

A small band of mallards is at present making its home on the far bank of Link river and it's a day's entertainment just to watch them. They spend most of the morning resting in a quiet little backwater that is overhung with trees. No danger of hawks or hunters and they seem quite happy. About noon they take off up-river for points unknown and come back about 4 o'clock. Then they swim around and investigate up and down the river for a ways and then gang up in the backwater to rest again. About dark, when there is just enough light to make them out, they pick up off the water and go up the river again, flying between the banks and low over the water. They must rest overnight on the upper lake because they come pitching back in to their playground just about 8 o'clock in the morning. The only prettier way to see them is over the barrels of a shotgun.

FOUND that I was minus a copy of Saturday's paper yesterday and stopped by the plant here to pick one up. You'd think there would be at least a few around the place where they are printed—but there wasn't a sign of a paper. I finally reached up into the folder on the press and got the last completely cut paper from the innards of that gadget. But I guess that's all right. Nothing in the world quite so dead as yesterday's newspaper.
