Roman Roads Found In England

CHESTER, England (AP)—Two roads built by Roman legions in the 1st century A. D. have been uncovered by archeologists excavating the site of an old Roman fortress here. The roads, one above the other are almost directly below a modern street.

A worn coin of the Roman Emperor Vespasian and fragments of pottery found in the excavation helped the archeologists estimate when the roads were in use. The Romans first build a fortress here about A. D. 48. Named Deva, it became an important military and commercial center and later was the permanent headquarters of one of the legions Rome stationed in Britain.
