London Mercury Falling Down

LONDON, Oct. 27 (AP)—London's temperature dropped to 33 today—the coldest weather since early last spring. Cooking, heating and lighting in many areas were hampered by the first power cuts of the season.

Such cuts in the power supply have been an almost daily winter-time occurrence of Britain's recent austerity winters. There are not enough electric plants to supply the increased demands.

With 10 per cent less electricity available for three morning hours, lights were dimmer.
