Oregon Tech Family

With most Oregon Tech students, going to school becomes a family affair—so it is with the young Chuck Warrens. (1) Chuck, halfback on the Owl football squad, is equally deft at handling the intricate tools of a watchmaker's trade. (2) Keeping the baby's "wardrobe" in shape is part of pretty Jarmaine Warred's busy day. (3) Farrell hall is the building where Chuck studies his watchmaking course. (4) Time to roll out for another day. (5) A quick cup of coffee, a piece of toast, a hasty glance at the morning sports page, and he's off for class. (6) A parting kiss on the doorstep of the Warrens' campus apartment. (7)

Sleepy little Jeffrey, 3 months old, is the center of interest. (8) Watchmaking, football, or changing Jeffrey's diaper—Chuck takes them all in stride. (9) The young Warrens, who came here from Ashland, have until June to call OTI home. Then, Chuck will complete his course. (10) Proof of Jarmaine's cooking—two other ball players are regular dinner boarders. (11) Jarmaine occasionally comes out to watch the team practice, but always is in the rooting section at OTI games. (12) Favorite evening recreation is a misan game of double solitaire. (Pictures and text by Wes Guderian and Edna Killmeyer)
