

Evansville's 3000 Teen 'Landlords'

RAILROAD FREIGHT YARD is the backdrop for Evansville's Community Center, but the 3000 teen-age landlords have erased the railroad atmosphere from their unique project.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (NEA)—The Evansville Community Center, Inc., has 3000 "landlords." It entertains 20,000 teen-agers a month. It is open from nine in the morning until 10 at night, six days a week. It is the scene of dances, parties and just plain fun. Yet there's not one set of initials scrawled on the walls.

The center is unique in many ways. Physically, it may not be as attractive as some; it is converted from a 50-year-old railway station that had later served as an automobile salesroom and a war time USO. Its location, too, is not physically attractive — it is on a busy downtown corner next to busy railroad tracks—but that location makes it more convenient.

Another factor that makes this center unusual is the complete lack of any restrictive signs. The youngsters decided on their own to ban smoking, for example, but no signs were tacked up.

Plenty To Do

When asked why smoking was outlawed, one girl said: "There is enough to do here without it. Besides, it is another way to get in more solid with the adults."

Finding "enough to do here" is the job of the center's director, Arthur J. Grady, and his wife, Margaret, who serves as program supervisor. Grady emphasizes one point, "the kids are free to do what they want."

They function in small groups, rather than in masses. This, Grady feels, allows them to engage in the activities in which they are interested and encourages them to make their own friends. There is dancing indoors and out with a 12-piece orchestra two nights a week, volleyball, pool, shuffleboard, basketball court, ample places to lounge, shops, snack bar, table tennis, badminton, piano and a complete kitchen.

Bosses

"Landlords" of the center are 3000 teen-agers and young adults who hold $1 memberships. Seventy-five adult groups, including Alcoholics Anonymous, hold their regular sessions in the meetings rooms of the former depot. For this privilege there is no charge, but in return they give leadership and some financial aid to the youngsters.

An important source of income is the city's tax revenues, $33,000 of which was turned over to the center last year.

The fact that the taxpayers help support the center, plus the interest shown by the adult groups, makes Evansville's project truly a community center. Both political parties support it, and no political patronage is allowed to creep in.

Supervision

The city owns the building and the corporation holds the lease. Two representatives from each of 75 organizations make up a council that supervises the center. When he finally did get up I asked if he could make it. De Lillo said, "He said he could. He was a good sport about it."

Sosner stumbled into the wings and collapsed into the arms of a property man. His wife, in the balcony at the Lyric theatre, hurried backstage.

Musie, Death

But the violinist died before an ambulance arrived, before the end of the scherzo he had started.

The audience was not told Sosner had died. His leaving the stage was remarked on in the lobby during intermission. Stewart told the members of the orchestra at the end of the concert.

1st Violinist Succumbs On Concert Stage

BALTIMORE, Nov. 3 (AP)—Benjamin Sosner, 42-year-old first violinist of the Baltimore symphony orchestra, collapsed and died last night during a scherzo.

It was the orchestra's first concert of the season and Reginald Stewart was conducting Brahms' symphony No. 1.

Sosner broke into a cold sweat as the orchestra launched into the lively third movement of the symphony—the scherzo.

"Awful"

"I had seen the same pallor before," Stewart said. "It was awful. I tried not to look."

Walter J. De Lillo was sitting beside Sosner. He urged the stricken violinist to go backstage.

"When he finally did get up I asked if he could make it," De Lillo said. "He said he could. He was a good sport about it."

Kosel New Craigs Store Manager

Selection of A. A. Kosel as store manager for Craigs, 615 Main has been announced by D. F. Engel, president of Craigs, Inc. following a visit here recently. Kosel has been acting temporarily in that capacity. He will be assisted as manager of the local merchandise firm by his wife, Lou Kosel, who is well known to Main street shoppers.

Engle was accompanied on his inspection trip of Western stores by his assistant, H. A. Schutt, also of New York City. Engel has been a Klamath visitor several times, generally being a guest here during duck hunting season.

TO LET, $1.96

PRESTON, England, Nov. 3 (AP) J. Robertson advertised a cottage for rent at 14 shillings ($1.96) a week. He was swamped by more than 1000 replies and now is interviewing prospective renters 12 at a time.

Attack Kills Cardinal Marmaggi

ROME, Nov. 3 (AP)—Francesco Cardinal Marmaggi, one of the top administrators in the Vatican, died early today following a heart attack. He was 73.

Cardinal Marmaggi, elevated to the sacred college in 1935, was prefect of the congregation of the council. He directed the application and enforcement of decrees of the council of Trent and other church laws.

His death reduces the membership of the college of cardinals to 54. The full membership is 70.

Cardinal Marmaggi suffered a heart attack November 28 and had been in critical condition ever since.

Numbers Raid

PORTLAND, Nov. 3 (AP)—Thirteen men and two women were arrested yesterday in a basement room on charges of operating a policy numbers lottery. Detectives seized numbered slips, receipts and $401 in cash along with a "cage" used for the drawing.

Squaw Point Great Spot For Resort

By BILL JENKINS

REPORTS keep dribbling in, as they always do, on Halloween activities. To date the most popular remark has been—"I believe in the children having fun, but this . . . That remark is almost always made by the man or woman who happens to be out scraping the soap off their windows."

The Herald and News didn't come off scot free in the general hubbub. Our bright red boxes used along the rural routes were too much of a temptation for some of the pranksters and several hundred of them are missing along several of the country routes.

WE'VE got the jackhammers back in this end of town now as the men start ripping up the streets for more conduit of one kind and another. Progress, it would seem, is nearly always noisy.

THOSE who drive California streets regularly are eagerly awaiting the full opening of the new two-lane street. It will make a big difference in both time and safety to get away from that narrow stretch of pavement. And will eliminate the traffic hazard at the Third street curve.

TOOK a run up to Squaw Point on the Upper lake the other day on another of those fruitless duck hunting trips we indulge in once in a while. Went up by compass and guess in the fog and came back just at sunset. Even nursing a sick old board my partner and I were struck by the beauty of the scene. It seems a shame that the big lake can't be turned into a summer resort playground. Nowhere else in the area can you find a lake that offers so many possibilities for fun, relaxation and sport.

The timber-clad hills of the west side come right down to the water. Mountains rise majestically almost from the shore and there are countless roads and trails to be explored. Fishing is as good as anywhere else, sailing and motorboating are good and year in and year out Klamath's weather is at least as good as any other place. If we could just get the lake cleaned up a bit and do a lot of advertising it could be put to full use.

FELLOW stopped me on the street the other day about my suggestion on the traffic lanes. He was afraid that by lining the corners for turns you would lose parking spaces. You would lose a few, but you would gain speed. And as for the parking spaces, you don't make sense anyway. For instance: across the street from this office is a yellow curb area set aside as a truck-loading zone for a hotel. In the past weeks I've watched it pretty closely and I haven't seen more than half a dozen trucks in all that time. Some of those were parked over there to service this office. We've got an alley they can use if they want to. As a matter of fact there are a lot of no parking zones in town that aren't used enough to warrant their being there. But suggest taking out one parking meter and you run into instant wrath. Maybe I'm wrong. Maybe people like to take twice as long to do something as they really need to, but I still believe that time is the most precious thing we have. And as for the right turn lanes, you would really only need the space of two cars to make it work moderately well. But we still need them. Found that out again today.

CARD OF THANKS

Would like to thank all our friends and neighbors for kindness shown to us at the loss of our beloved son, Harvey K. McEling, also to the friends whose addresses were not on the cards that were received with all the lovely flowers.

Record

In discussing his record Driscoll points to a new streamlined state government and enactment of a program of civil rights and social measures. This, his associates as has placed him among the leaders of the GOP liberal wing.

His attacks on the federal government have centered on taxes and spending. The democratic party, he says, is the party of big government bent on "centralized power in Washington."

During his campaign Driscoll has stressed his record as governor the past three years. On numerous occasions he has jabbed at the present democratic national administration.

Hague foe

His opponent in the Tuesday election is Democrat Elmer H. Wene, a longtime congressman backed by Frank "Boss" Hague whose once all-powerful political machine has been creaking of late.

How much influence Hague still wields may determine the election which many politicians see as a close one.

During his campaign Driscoll has stressed his record as governor the past three years. On numerous occasions he has jabbed at the present democratic national administration.

Candidate Keeps Submachine Gun

MANILA, Nov. 3 (AP)—Presidential Candidate Jose P. Laurel today balked at turning over personal firearms carried by his bodyguards during the last week of the feverish national election campaign.

President Elpidio Quirino banned the carrying of weapons except by police from November 1 to November 20.

Laurel said he had been granted a permit to carry a weapon "for my protection." He refused to give it up. It is a submachine gun.
