

New School Planners Go Functional

By DAVID TAYLOR MARKE
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK—If educators have their way the school house of the future will have outer walls of window panes and glass blocks.

The buildings will be functional rather than traditional in design. They will be sprawling structures, liberally splashed with color, even to "blackboards" of yellow, green and white.

The catch is, educators don't know where the $10 billion experts estimate will be needed in the next ten years to house America's bumper crop of children is coming from.

School Management Magazine queried 10,400 city, county and diocesan school superintendents on the type of buildings and equipment they would like to have. Their replies show typical forms such as colonial, early American and Gothic are out. There is a marked tendency to conserve taxpayers' dollars by eliminating such unessential detail as old fashioned pitched roofs.

The greatest external change would be window treatment. Instead of single-pane windows, which offer little insulation against temperature extremes, double-pane glass is wanted. Glass blocks, used primarily for directional lighting is favored also.

The educators want a room designed for television reception and other visual education media. Music rooms, gymnasiums, auditoriums, a dispensary and cafeteria are considered essential also.

On the question of heating equipment, most educators prefer a central-type system utilizing either steam or hot water. They want unit ventilators as a means of keeping classroom air healthfully fresh as well as comfortable. Air conditioning also appears on the list of desirable items for modern schools.

Jap Store Has Big Day---Hic!

TOKYO, Nov. 3 (AP)—The Mitsukoshi department store—one of Tokyo's largest—made lots of new friends yesterday.

It was free taste day at the liquor counter.

Products of 14 Japanese distilleries were introduced.

There to meet them were thousands of Japanese lined three deep. Clerks were lined three deep behind the counters, too.

The accepted rule was one for the customer and one for the clerk. Apparently the clerks won for they were still three deep behind the counter when the last tipsy customer left.

Tomorrow the counter will sell liquor—that is if the clerks make it down in time to open up.

Boeing Votes Aero Union Big Majority

SEATTLE, Nov. 3 (AP)—Official results of the Boeing Airplane company's jurisdictional election gave the Aeronautical Mechanics union of the Independent International Association of Machinists almost a two-to-one margin today.

The final count, announced by Thomas P. Graham Jr., regional national labor relations board director, gave the Aero Mechanics 8107 ballots compared with 4217 for the Aeronautical Workers, Warehousemen and Helpers union, an AFL-teammate affiliate.

Another 401 workers preferred no union at all.

In addition, 2132 ballots were challenged and 286 were voided, but inclusion of these in the totals would have made no difference in the result.

8-day Wait

Graham said either party involved in the election has five days in which to file objections. He would make no comment on teamster protests over a typographical error on some ballots which designated the machinists as an AFL union rather than independent.

Fred Englert, director of the western conference of teamsters, also declined comment on the "typo" pending further conferences with legal counsel.

Only 260 ballots were affected by the error.

Final OK

Final certification of the election will depend on the NLRB's ruling on objections, if any. If the results are certified, it will give the machinists the right to represent production workers as their collective bargaining agent. It will not affect jobs held by teamster members nor those in some minor classifications such as engineering employees where the Seattle Professional Engineering Employees association (I.N.D.), won out 19-0.

British Plan Long Parachute Jumps

LONDON (AP)—Do you want to know how it feels to fall more than 30,000 feet? Four 23-year-old British youths hope to have the answer next year by attempting delayed parachute jumps from above 35,000 feet.

Among them the four have chalked up more than 300 training jumps from low and medium altitudes. For their big attempt—in which they plan to drop from 35,000 feet to below 3,000 before opening their special parachutes—they will use oxygen masks and carry various recording instruments.

This jump, they say, should contribute valuable information on the medical aspects of free falls from high altitudes. It should also give them a claim to an unofficial world record for delayed drops.
