

County Schools Start Big Bird Conservation Program; Prizes Listed

Yesterday marked the start of a large-scale bird conservation project launched by the Klamath county school district, adding impetus to this all-important Klamath basin problem.

Carroll B. Howe, Klamath county school superintendent, in announcing the county-wide school program, emphasized the importance of the conservation problems and the part that school children should play in the over-all picture.

The contest has been divided into three phases, a poster essay and a feeding and shelter program.

Closing dates are December 31 for the poster and essay contests and March 5 for the feeding and shelter program.

Six Groups

For contest purposes, the county schools have been divided into six groups. Group 1 is Clifton, Crescent Lake, Sherwin, Raymond Camp, Chilcoot, Shasta, and Fort Klamath; group 2, Sprague River, Bly and Bonanza; group 3, Keno, Summers, Fairhaven and Weyerhaeuser Camp; group 4, Merrill and Malin; group 5, Henley and Shasta; and group 6, Altamont elementary and Altamont junior high school.

Poster divisions are grades 4, 5 and 6 in group A, grades 7, 8 and 9 in group B and grades 10, 11 and 12 in group C.

Prizes

A prize will be given in each poster group in each school geographic area. Entrants must bring posters to the county school office by the deadline, not more than three from each room or class.

Posters will be judged primarily on the effectiveness of the message it carries, in addition to accuracy, workmanship and composition.

The essay contest, either bird stories or compositions, has been split into four divisions: group A, grades 3 and 4; group B, grades 5 and 6; group C, grades 7, 8 and 9; and group D, grades 10-11 and 12.

Three Entries

As in the poster contest, three stories may be submitted to the county school office from each room or class.

Prizes will also be given in the essay competition.

City Refuses Conger Pump, Well Funds

A request from the city recreation department for approval of the use of $500 from its depreciation fund to put in a well and pump at Conger field was turned down last night by the city council and the recreation department told to look elsewhere for the money.

Sam Smith, recreation director, said the work must, for safety sake, be done while the irrigation canal by the field is free of water. In the spring when a head of water is going through the canal the wall of the canal could not be cut.

Necessary

Original plans for irrigating Conger field — the city's new athletic field near Conger school — did not include construction of a well, but changes in plans made by the bureau of reclamation made it necessary.

If the work is not done and a pump installed this fall or winter, there probably will be no way of watering Conger field next summer, a member of the recreation committee said today. The field is to be put into use next summer.

Delay

The council's veto of use of the department's depreciation fund was coupled with a suggestion that Smith and Henry Perkins, city attorney, get together to seek other means of raising funds for the well and pump, but may have the effect of ruling out the work for this year.

The council's reasoning on the refusal was that it did not approve of depreciation funds being used for new construction.

Frost Denies Bootlegging To Indians

before Judge Vandenberg which brought about Frost's arrest.

Finger Points

Riddle was in court for violation of a probation order and told Judge Vandenberg he bought whiskey from Frost.

Riddle testified yesterday afternoon he, with three other Indian boys, paid Frost $10 for the bottle of whiskey in the late afternoon of last May 30, after leaving the Beauty rodeo.

Frost testified today he did not sell liquor to Riddle or anyone else and that he was out of Beauty most of the day in question. He said he was attending a movie in Klamath Falls during the late afternoon of May 30.

'Party'

Frost, a white man and ranch laborer, also said he could not recall making the various liquor purchases indicated by the liquor store sales slips, but that if he did buy a quantity of liquor shortly before last May 30 "it was for a party and we drank it."

The young man has been previously convicted of a misdemeanor charge of selling liquor to Indians and paid a $250 fine. That was almost two years ago.

The trial in circuit court is being attended by about 50 spectators, most of them Indian residents of the Beauty area.

Jurors are:

Noel B. Flynn, A. L. Wheeler, Anna Funk, Haaby Bechen, William D. Rush, Jack O. Wimer, William H. Melhase, Grant W. Bailey, Oren Storey, J. W. Van Doren, Loy J. Barker and Donald Smith.

Girls Aiding Firemen With Yuletide Toys

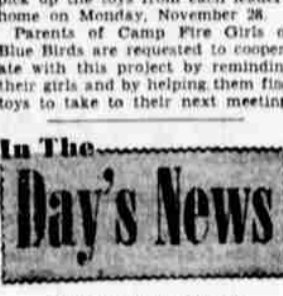

Camp Fire Girls and Blue Birds are answering the plea of the city fire department to help find and turn in toys and games which are no longer in use, but which may be repaired by the firemen and again bring fun and happiness to other children on Christmas morning.

All Camp Fire Girls and all Blue Birds in Klamath Falls are urged to look around their own houses for discarded toys and perhaps to ask their neighbors if they might have a doll, wagon, truck, sled, or any other toy that is just lying around collecting dust. Any toys found should be taken to the next Camp Fire or Blue Bird meeting, or taken to the home of the leader of the girls' Camp Fire or Blue Bird group.

Hurry!

These toys must be gathered soon, so that there will be time for the necessary repairs and distribution. They should be at the home of the leader by next week at the latest. The Camp Fire truck will be used to pick up the toys from each leader's home on Monday, November 28.

Parents of Camp Fire Girls or Blue Birds are requested to cooperate with this project by reminding their girls and by helping them find toys to take to their next meeting.
