Vets Can Get High School Diploma Test

SALEM, Nov. 16 (AP)—War veterans, if they know enough, can get high school diplomas even if they haven't graduated from high school.

The state veterans department said today that tests are being given in 15 Oregon cities to measure veterans' knowledge of grammar, literature, social studies, natural sciences, and mathematics.

If a veteran proves he knows as much about these subjects as the average high school graduate does, then he can get a high school diploma.

Equals

The department said that service in the armed forces can give veterans enough general knowledge to make him the educational equal of a high school graduate.

The tests are limited to veterans who served at least 90 days, and who enlisted before July 25, 1947.

The testing centers are located in Portland, Astoria, Baker, Bend, Eugene, Heppner, Klamath Falls, La Grande, Coos Bay, Ontario, Pendleton, Salem, The Dalles, Corvallis and Ashland.

The tests are given by school officials.

In Klamath Falls

Superintendent Arnold Gralapp of the public schools said these tests were the usual G.T. tests which have been given here since the war.

Any interested veteran may obtain further information by contacting the superintendent's office at KUHS.

Spy Suspect's Boss Tells Of Decoy Note

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP)—Judith Coplon's former boss told today of giving the young woman a highly secret memo that related to atomic energy and turned out to be a decoy.

The government charges that excerpts from the message were found in Miss Coplon's purse when FBI agents arrested her and Soviet Espionage "Valentin Gubitchev in New York.

William E. Foley, head of the internal security and foreign agents registration section of the justice department, told of giving the message to the former government girl.

He was the eleventh and last witness called in a federal court hearing by which Miss Coplon's lawyer, Archibald Palmer, is seeking to prevent her from being tried with Valentin Gubitchev on a spy conspiracy charge.

Foley said he told Miss Coplon, then employed in his department, that the message was "strictly confidential," "hot," and "very interesting" when he gave it to her in Washington the morning of the day she was arrested.
