Champion Turkey Off to Turkey

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 21 (AP)—A grand champion turkey left here Saturday night for the Middle-East country of the same name—Oregon's gift to a Thanksgiving day dinner table in Ankara.

The big bird, very much alive and gobbling, was chucked aboard an airliner here for the long trans-continental and trans-oceanic flight. It is tagged for President Ismet Inonu of Turkey.

Going along on the trip to keep the gobbler fed and comfy, is Gene Malecki, Salem, manager of the annual Pacific Turkey Exhibit at McMinnville. He also carried a few spares—dressed and ready for the oven. Two are for Washington, D. C., dinner tables. One is for President Truman and the second for the ambassador of Turkey. One dressed bird is going all the way to Ankara, just in case something happens to the lively critter dubbed "Unity" by judges who picked the grand champion.

The answers to everyday insurance problems ★

Insurance Counselor

QUESTION: What items should be considered in arriving at the total amount of theft insurance which should be carried? We read in the papers about burglars who back a moving van up to a house when the owners are away and simply take everything, but it seems foolish to pay the premium on a big insurance policy when the chances of something like that happening are so very slight.

ANSWER: You should make a careful inventory of all items to be insured against theft and should include all things which are valuable and which could be easily carried away. Watches, jewelry, clothing, cameras, sports equipment, typewriters and radios are good examples.
