

Airport Zoning Setup Frowned on by City; Rue Supervision Loss

Members of the city council last night expressed themselves as being displeased with the procedure set up by the state legislature in 1947 for the establishment of airport zoning machinery.

Under the present legislation three separate committees are set up, a zoning board, a zoning commission, which actually does most of the work, and a board of appeals.

What puzzled the councilmen was the need for the zoning commission. The city fathers were also worried because supervision of zoning would be taken out of the council's hands.

State Law

According to state law the zoning is initiated by appointment of four men, two by resolution of the council, and two by similar action of the county court.

This four-man group then appoints a fifth person who is to act as chairman of the board. After this step is done, the five man board appoints the zoning commission which may be composed of three, five or seven members.

Appeal Board

Finally an appeal board is set up to contend with any protests by the public on zoning procedures as carried out by the commission.

Many opinions "pro and con" on the situation were voiced by the council and several department heads.

City Engineer E. A. Thomas remarked that there was need for protection of the airport in regard to limiting heights of structures in the two-and-a-half mile radius set down by state law. He added that not more than three or four residences would be affected by zoning the airport runways.

"However," Thomas added, "the area near Homedale road would be affected for quite some distance."

Only Way

City Attorney Henry Perkins told the council that there was no other way of going about the zoning procedure. "The method outlined by the 1947 legislature is the only way the procedure can be done," said Perkins.

Councilman Alfred Condry broached the proposition that "this is a program that will last 25 to 30 years. The council should consider future expansion of the city," Condry stated, "and whether this move will affect city expansion."

Airport Manager "Red" Whitcomb reminded the city dads of the importance of protecting what they had invested in the municipal airport in past years and what would be invested in the future.

Both Councilmen Darrell Miller and G. C. Tatman were of the opinion that there was a need for the zoning process. "But," Miller stated, "I can't see the need for so many committees, particularly the zoning commission."

Further discussion on the subject was ended when Councilman Condry moved that the city attorney be instructed to draw up a resolution for the purpose of setting up a joint airport zoning board, and that the city attorney be authorized to ask for resignations of the present board members to make way for appointment of the new board.

Industry Leads In Chest Drive

The $65,541 Klamath County Community Chest campaign is heading into the last lap. Within the next 24 hours the drive is slated to come to an official close with a final report meeting at noon tomorrow in the Winema hotel.

Standings of the various divisions following the Monday report session were: Industrial, 76 per cent of quota; commercial, 85 per cent; small business, 83 per cent; public service, 60 per cent; government and education, 67 per cent; residential, 52 per cent, and the county division, 42 per cent.

Good Work

The campaign continued to be highlighted with stellar soliciting performances by various business and industrial firms. Heading the list during the past several days was the outstanding participation in the campaign by Weyerhaeuser Timber company with better than 110 per cent of the company goal and still uncompleted.

Other firms to receive campaign "Oscars" as Goal Busters included Louie's grocery, Klamath Falls Garbage collection, Link River Motors, Standard Oil company, and Payless Drug.

Companies honored as Hard Hitters in the drive include Arrow Transit, Inc., Burness Motors, Pyock's, Holland Heating service, Waldgreen Drug, Y. Market, Union Oil Co., and Pacific Telephone and Telegraph.

have not done what was really expected of them. It can only be hoped that these firms which did not subscribe even as much as they did last year fell short because they did not realize the extreme importance of generous participation in the Chest campaign.

"All of this adds up to but one thing. We have a Community Chest and we must produce $65,541 to finance operation of the Chest agencies for the year 1950. To date we are falling short of that objective. We agree that we want to finance these agencies through one campaign. So, it is up to all of us who haven't subscribed to make our contribution at once. And it is up to those who didn't give enough to give more, enough more to produce the amount the campaign appears to be short, approximately $7000."

Legion Officers at OTI Meet

OTI—Legion officers attended a student council meeting, November 21. Fred Heilbronner, District 4 commander; Paul Steinke, Post 8 commander; Lynn Roycroft, past commander; and Hal Ogle Jr., past commander, left no doubt as to where the Legion stood concerning veteran problems. These gentlemen also invited any veterans and wives interested to attend their post and auxiliary meetings.

Council members expressed the desire to hear more often from men of this organization and passed a resolution to take information on the District 4 conference of state Legion officials, back to their respective classes. This meeting will take place in the Veterans Memorial building, 4th and Klamath, Saturday, December 10 at 2 p. m. All Ortech veterans and wives were invited to attend as the auxiliary officers will hold open business conference at the same time.

A potluck dinner and dancing complete the card for this occasion.
