Worldwide Bible Reading text for today: Christian Life and Service, Romans 12:
I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

And be not conformed to this world: but ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God.

For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith.

For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office:
So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.

Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith;
Or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth, on teaching;

Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that sheweth mercy, with cheerfulness.

Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good.
Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honour preferring one another;

Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord;
Rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing in prayer;

Distributing to the necessity of saints; given to hospitality.
Bless them which persecute you: bless, and curse not.

Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.
Be of the same mind one toward another. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits.

Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men.
If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men.

Dearlly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.

Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.

Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

A Tear for the Old Bus

By DEB ADDISON

ADDISON

Now I know how the guy felt when he saddled Old Paint for the last time. One who was raised on broken down Model T's and who acquired a Model A and has driven it since early war days herewith publicly sheds a tear. The "Old Paint" Model A has been turned out to pasture. No matter how wheezy and creaky the old bus was, and no matter how shiny and up to date the '30 model, still it's like turning down a faithful friend to make the switch.

Tradition has been faithfully maintained for years that the advertising manager drove the oldest chunk in the joint. Now the mailing room boys and the printer's devil have something to shoot at. But don't worry, they'll catch up.

Tradition also has been that whenever yours truly finally broke down and bought a suit than McDonald or one of the other boys broke out with two. The last time a new hat graced his

They're Killing Themselves Striving for Longer Life

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Many people today are shortening their lives trying to find a way to live longer. The main idea seems to be that if a man puts his whole energy into earning money he can pile up enough chips in the bank to retire at 50 or 55, and spend his declining years clipping bond coupons.

BOYLE

This is a fine theory except that it is often the widows who do the coupon clipping. The overly ambitious men have a bad habit of ending up under the daisies at 40 to 45, dead from a burst heart artery or valve brought on by worry and taut living.

The United States has more miles of arterial highways than any other country in the world. It also has more miles of arteriosclerosis in the veins of its fretful citizens. Its apoplexy rate is a matter for medical police.

It is true that Americans live longer—on the average—than most peoples. But this is a triumph of mass sanitation rather than individual common sense.

For folks here no longer can blame a poor hungry germ for killing them. A germ hardly dares bite anybody in America anymore for fear he'll be slugged in the proto-plasm with a new wonder drug. No American today, in large measure, have no one but themselves to blame if they don't live out their three score and ten years. They have the dubious honor of killing themselves—through their own ignorance.

Easy Does It
In the opinion of this poor man's philosopher the trouble lies in the fact that as a nation we have never learned that "easy does it." We take an unjustified pride in living the strenuous life—so we work and play with the throttle wide open. And we eat, drink and smoke too receding brow, why, Epley came out with a XXX beaver. The tradition stands.

It's Photographer Wes Ousterian this time. He has a '30 model car, and it's not just a standard like ours. It has all the deluxe gadgets, overdrive, radio, flashing lights, sound effects, automatic this and that, and hot and cold running water. You can't win.

The World Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

WHEN you've sifted those 17,000 words of charges hurled at Russia in the United Nations by Nationalist China you will, I believe, find that the nub of the controversy really is control of Manchuria.

The Chinese allegations are grave. The Soviet Union is accused of violating the Sino-Russian treaty of 1945 which the Chinese Nationalists maintain committed the Soviet Union to support only the Nationalist regime as the central government of China. The indictment further maintains that Moscow agreed Manchuria was a part of China.

With this as a premise the Chinese delegation at Lake Success accuses Russia of giving economic and military aid to the Chinese Communists, and of obstructing the Chinese Nationalist government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in its efforts to reestablish its authority in Manchuria.

And pepper for this already hot dish is added in the allegation that Russian troops committed hundreds of atrocities in Manchuria. These are specified.

Well, now, having delivered such a broadside, what is it that the Chinese really want? Are they seeking the expulsion of Russia from the peace organization, as happened in 1939 when the League of Nations evicted her for invading little Finland?

No, Nationalist China apparently isn't after sanctions against Moscow. What she seeks is a moral judgment. She wants the U.N. to confirm her charge that the Soviet is guilty of violating the Sino-Russian treaty. She wants the U.N. members to refrain from establishing diplomatic relations with the Chinese Communist regime at Peiping under General Mao Tse-tung.

What Good?
AND what good will that do the Chinese Nationalists at this late stage, when the Chinese Communist armies have overrun most of China? I believe what the Nationalists have in mind is this:

While the Red armies have captured a large portion of China, Chiang Kai-shek's forces still retain a grip on considerable territory in the southwest and he also has created a powerful military position on the big island of Formosa which he holds off the southeast coast. That is to say he still retains a foothold.

Chiang is well aware that it's one thing to overrun the country with troops, and another to establish a government which can govern close to half a billion impoverished peasants and rehabilitate the vast nation. That's a task which calls for mountainous help from the outside world—mainly from the western powers. If that help isn't forthcoming, the chances are that any regime—Communist or Nationalist—will eventually fail.

So, if a majority of the U.N. membership, including the western powers, should condemn Russia, and agree not to recognize the Chinese Communist regime, the Chinese Nationalists might have a chance to make a comeback. That is, they might have a chance if their rights in Manchuria were restored so that they could take advantage of the great resources of that country.

This Chinese puzzle is like the lock on your safety deposit box in the bank. It takes more than one key to unlock it. Manchuria, with its industries and natural resources, is a vital key. With that restored to China, and with help from the western world, she would in time regain her feet.

This impels one to ask what the chances are of Soviet Russia withdrawing from Manchuria. I doubt if any neutral observers would want to bet that Moscow would make such a move. I doubt equally whether Nationalist China really expects it, although she is making an all-out play to force such a development.

Actually, most informed Chinese express the belief that Russia intends to maintain control of Manchuria, and from that vantage point to keep a close rein on the rest of China. That would provide a mighty base from which to direct the spread of communism in Asia.

PO Workers Get Praise For TB Aid

The postal employees of the county are tendered the thanks and appreciation of the Klamath Tuberculosis association through the county chairman of the Christmas Seal sale, Mrs. W. A. Shannon, for their dependable aid in getting the sale off to a good start.

The sale, which will continue until Christmas, is conducted principally by mail, and the bulk of the distribution of seals falls to the postmen. The delivery of seals began November 21 and should be completed this week.

Mrs. Shannon pointed out that it is appropriate to recognize the work of the postal employees because it was a humane postal clerk in Denmark who originated the idea of the Christmas seal, back in 1904.

The Klamath TB and Health association board and council meeting will be held at the Willard hotel Wednesday at 12 o'clock.

Maybe Gargantua Had Good Outlook on Life; At Least He Had Plenty of Dignity

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (AP)—I wonder how we looked to Gargantua.

Until he died yesterday, 40 million of us had paid our dough to take a gander at Gargantua in the circus. But all the time he was looking at us, too.

Modesty didn't mean anything to him. Nor did pride. So he never had to worry whether anyone liked his hat, shirt, pants, or shoes.

But the human men he saw were so consoled by clothes they must have looked to him like so many heads pinned between a hat and a suit.

And there wasn't one of them who ever stopped to envy his great chest that he couldn't have locked with one hand. So inferiority didn't bother him, either.

But the women must have puzzled him greatly as he gazed out at them with his dark and glistening eyes.

In Africa the gorilla girls he knew walked solidly, one bare foot after the other, being always themselves—if not exactly sweet, at least simple.

But the human girls minced past. Gargantua probably couldn't have understood that they walked like that because they had deliberately chosen to torture themselves with high-heeled shoes.

Some of them, from the hats they wore, must have seemed to Gargantua like moving gardens.

Unlike the gorilla girls, who were always completely frank in their attire, the human ones—encased in shoes, stockings, dresses, sweaters, coats, and pants—carefully upholstered themselves to make nature seem more generous to them than nature ever intended.

Sometimes, when he looked at them, I wonder whether Gargantua suspected they were girls at all.

And then there were the little children who made faces at him.

Minded Little
If Gargantua acted rough there were humans around to keep him in line. He was big and probably didn't mind too much.

But I wonder what he thought when he saw a mother swat a two-year old because the two-year old insisted on staying to look at Gargantua instead of moving on with mama.

Of course, Gargantua ate better than some of the people who filed past him, and was kept warmer, but why an ape should get better treatment than some humans was something he probably didn't brood over.

Quiet
Having a pretty poor vocabulary, there wasn't much he could say to anyone or anyone else in the state.

And that probably worked out all right for him, since it always kept him non-partisan. He didn't know whether he was a proletarian or a capitalist.

Taking no sides, he didn't have to "awake at night, worrying about which side won."

It's possible his enforced silence filled him with frustrations at times.

But, unlike many humans who lack the courage to assert themselves, this shaking off frustrations, reports indicate Gargantua was not reluctant to let his anger, dislikes and intentions be known when he felt the occasion called for a declaration.

This may have been one reason why he was able to live so long in captivity. And while he wasn't able to carry on a conversation with humans, humans weren't able to bother him with their small talk, either.

Dignity
In this way, standing pretty much on his own feet, he must have developed a sense of dignity for, although 40 million of us intruded on him, in the end he intruded on no one.

When it came time to die, he lay down quietly, and died, bothering no one.

Cat Gets Rough, But Free, Ride

OAKLAND, Calif., Nov. 28 (AP)—The kind of noises Ike Sum's car was making, it took more than an automobile mechanic to fix it.

A policeman, Don Holley by name, tried his hand at it. And promptly got bitten.

The noise and the biting both came from a half-grown kitten, tightly wedged between fan and radiator. Holley rescued the unappreciative cat—somehow worse from wear—and Sum drove off, his engine purring softly.

Angel Passed By

For centuries the Egyptians had God's Chosen People in slavery. God is now to show his wrath and send the Angel of Death to slay all the first-born in every household. But God would save the first-born of the Hebrews so He commanded the Hebrew fathers to kill a lamb and put the blood on the doorpost and the Angel of Death would see the blood and pass over. The Hebrew fathers believed, obeyed and saw their sons saved. Exodus 12—BIBLE.

BLOOD SAVES TODAY
God would also see you safe under the blood. Stand on it that the blood of Jesus Christ God's Son has cleansed away all your sins and cleared your path. Judgment Day is out and eternal life is in. Now grow up. Live on the Bible promise—pray—look to Christ to power you in the new days and ways that prove the new life.

TELLING THE EDITOR

Letters printed here must not be longer than 500 words, must be written legibly on ONE SIDE of the paper, and must be signed by the writer. NAMES AND ADDRESSES of the writers, and the following these rules are warmly welcomed.

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—In a recent issue of your paper, Mrs. Rogers gave some interesting figures as to who pays our taxes.

Perhaps it may be well for us to look at the liquor problem from another angle.

California is a very wet state and it has 22,464 more holders of the federal retail liquor dealer tax stamp than there are state retail licenses, and in Oregon the difference is 1779 and of course we know that not all bootleggers have the federal stamp.

There was a great noise made about bootleggers in prohibition days by the wet interests—why are they quiet about it now?

Now, a few figures about legal liquors: In 1947, alcohol purchases exceeded our combined expenditure for education and religion by more than three billion dollars. We spend about 10 times as much for liquor as we give to God, and burn up four times as much in tobacco as we give for the advancement of our churches.

Now, who is spending all this money? Why, most of it by the working people, of course, and if they succeed in getting more money they will spend it more wisely.

The liquor interests spend many millions in fooling the public. As a sample is the 10 million expended for advertising in one popular magazine.

Preachers used to be temperance crusaders. What is the matter with them now?

Great nations have gone down in a mighty crash in the past because of the liquor traffic—shall not we take warning?

King Solomon said "For God shall bring every work into judgment whether it be good or whether it be evil."

Is it not time to take warning before we crash also?

Morse Stands By Sammons For Treasurer

EUGENE, Nov. 28 (AP)—Senator Wayne L. Morse, who has announced Saturday that Portland Banker E. C. Sammons would be treasurer of the senator's reelection campaign, had a defense of the appointment last night.

His statement here was an answer to criticism by Democratic National Committee member Monroe Sweetland. Sweetland heard of the Sammons appointment at Salem, and said it marked "a new low in the decline of the one-time liberal senator."

He declared "now one of Oregon's anti-labor leaders is to pay the fiddler and presumably call the tune."

Morse replied last night: "Eddie Sammons' record of outstanding citizenship needs no defense from me or anyone else in the state."

The republican senator, who is up for reelection next year, added that Sammons is "one of the progressive, liberal minded, forward looking republicans of our state. His work as a member of the Portland labor-management committee has won for him the respect of labor and his many public services in behalf of the people of our state has won for him the admiration of Oregonians generally."

TOKYO, Nov. 28 (AP)—Handsome H. Moriguchi, 31, has been married 15 times in the last 14 months. Everything went along smoothly until he disappeared with 20,000 yen belonging to his 15th bride. That made her father angry and he went to police.

Moriguchi readily admitted his 15 trips to the star. But he asked police for time in which to list his brides' names. He said there were so many he could not remember them all.

Police promised him lots of time.

Plunging Neckline on Way Out, Says Designer; Dress To Get Men, Not Whistles

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28 (AP)—Here is bad news for the men who have been delightfully bug-eyed over the ladies' plunging necklines: the fashion is on the way out.

But here's a silver lining for husbands: their wives will be able to convert to 1950 fashions with little expense.

Source of this glittering information is washish Edith Head, the hep fashion designer at Paramount. She is just back from Paris where she previewed next year's designs.

"Necklines are going to plunge," she reports "but only from side to side. No more bare bosoms, but there will be bare shoulders. In other words, clothes will be more provocative and less obvious."

Miss Head, who is busy designing clothes for Nancy Olson and Ruth Hussey in "Mr. Music," said the purpose of 1950 dresses will be to get men, not just whistles.

"The plunging neckline and split skirt may be okay for Saturday night at the corner drug store," she declared. "But they are becoming passe in circles where women dress in good taste."

"Next year's styles will be slim and draped, with lots of material but no padding or stuffing. Briefly, girls will again be girls—not upholstered clothes horses with square shoulders and deceptive angles."
