

Tom and Jerry Batter

1 dozen eggs.
Beat the whites and yolks separately until fluffy. Mix together and beat in powdered sugar until it is so thick you can't beat it another whirly. Call in a couple of strong men for this job.
Pour into hot mugs, one-third run and two-thirds whiskey. Add generous tablespoon of batter, pour boiling water carefully into the side of the cup to raise up the batter, sprinkle with nutmeg and serve. (This recipe will take between three and four packages of powdered sugar).

THE MEN IN THE NEWSROOM decided to put Susie in her place one Saturday afternoon as the holidays draw near, and they whipped up a fine bowl of Tom and Jerry. The recipe is given here. Above, left to right, Reporter Hale Scarborough and Nightman Dave Underhill work hand in glove to bring the batter to perfection. Hale pours a generous portion of the mix in a hot mug. Dave adds the boiling water, careful to let it pour gently down the inside of the mug; Conrad Lohoefer, "Tex" to the staff and your farm editor, sprinkles a dash of nutmeg—and then he tries the concoction. Looks good. It was!
