Red Faces For Detroit Newsmen

DETROIT, Dec 2 (AP)—There were red faces at two rival Detroit newspapers today.

A tale about shoes was responsible.

The Free Press, a morning paper, ran an account of the "mysterious disappearance" of a man and woman who had left 16 pairs of shoes at a cobbler's repair shop three months ago.

The story speculated that perhaps the couple—who owed $17.05 for repairs—had perished in the Noronic ship fire at Toronto September 17. Or possibly, the Free Press hinted, the man was an amnesia victim.

Both guesses were wrong.

The owner turned out to be William J. Scripps, a director of the afternoon Detroit News. Scripps simply hadn't claimed his shoes yet.

"We roared when we saw a picture of our shoes on page one of the Free Press," laughed his wife, Mrs. Virginia Scripps.

Cobbler Daniel Carbone was also happy. His $17.05 was safe.

Klamaths' To Get $200 Each

No restrictions were placed on use of the money but Indians owing money to the tribal loan board, hospitals and having other properly vouched debts will be required to pay those by deduction from their payments.

Money going to Indian children will be held in trust for them at the agency.

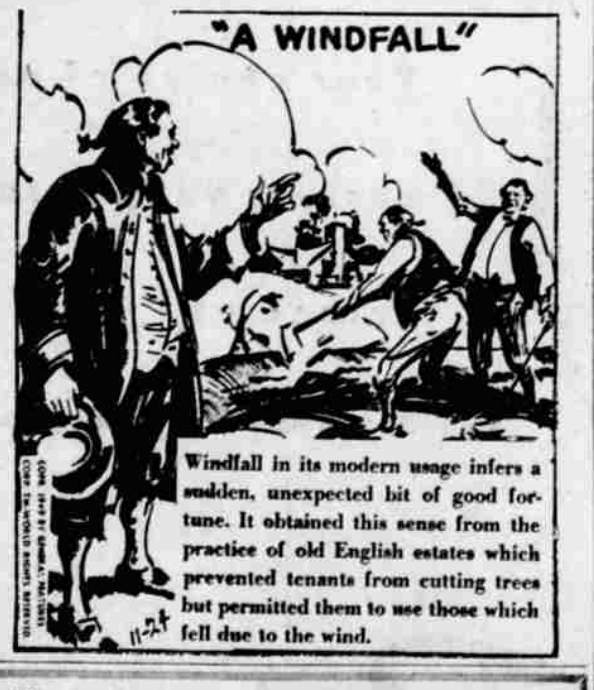
WHY WE SAY

By Lloyd J. Stevens



Windfall in its modern usage infers a sudden, unexpected bit of good fortune. It obtained this sense from the practice of old English estates which prevented tenants from cutting trees but permitted them to use those which fell due to the wind.
