Teen-Age Driving Classes Said No. 1 Safety Booster

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13 (AP)—Safety experts rate teen-age driver education as the No. 1 remedy for the nation's appalling toll of auto accidents—some 32,000 persons killed and 1,200,000 injured annually.

Norman Damon, vice president of the Automotive Safety foundation, regards the high school driver training program as "the most important single hope for better driver performance."

Damon says "there has been more postwar progress in school driver training than in any other field of traffic accident prevention."

Big Help Lou E. Holland, president of the American Automobile association, says "extension of driver training to every high school in America would go far toward solving the automobile safety problem."

Holland cites a survey in Delaware showing that untrained drivers were involved in about five times as many accidents as school-trained drivers.

Some 400,000 students in 8000 public high schools participated in driver education during the 1948-1949 school year, according to reports to the national education association. A number of parochial high schools also have driver instruction courses.

Accident reports from 28 states in 1948 showed that 31 per cent, nearly one in every three, of the drivers involved in all fatal accidents were under 2 years of age. One fourth of all auto injuries occur in the driver-age bracket of 15 to 24 years.

Educators recommend that the minimum total time for a complete program in driver education should be from 45 to 60 hours. This would average minimum time of six hours per student behind the wheel.

Safe Distance They also advised that house decorations should be kept above the head level and curtains should be six inches from window lights. "Observance of these precautions may make the Christmas season happier," the association said.
