

British Puzzle Solved By Mailmen

By BILL JENKINS

THE mails are wonderful. I thought I had seen every way there was of misspelling Klamath Falls, but good old Britain put them all to shame yesterday. The winter edition of Coming Events in Britain arrived with this address: The Herald-News, Keamath, Oregon, USA. Since it was delivered I guess it's okay, but a bit difficult for some poor postal clerk in San Francisco, I'll bet.

THIS British publication is kinda fun to read, but is mostly backward, according to the American way of thinking of things. Two pages are devoted to a sketchy list of coming events while the rest of the magazine is devoted to telling you either about past events or delving into the history of the country. A history of several counties is included, along with notes on books, racing, the British outlook and the fact that pantomime is coming back into popularity. Most of the ads are small screeds advertising cars for rent in case you wish to tour England in style. Complete with chauffeur or up to 16 hp models on a drive-yourself basis. No Buick Royces advertised. Only Fords and Daimlers.

THERE'S another Christmas practice just as prevalent as putting off the Yule shopping. That's tossing away the base for the tree every year and having to make a new one each time. Maybe it's part of the season, but I swear that this year I keep the base and save an hour's work next year.

LOOKS like maybe we're building up for a white Christmas, but the goose hunters will be just as happy if it holds off at least until the 24th and then thaws out on the 26th. A good storm right now wouldn't increase the bird population.

PEOPLE still haven't learned that California street is now two-way all the way. When they leave the pavement at Upham a lot of them swing over into the wrong lane and come busting down the street heading for the curve. Some day somebody's gonna get badly smashed up doing that. That oiled part is solid, honest.

Execution Date Set Back

PORTLAND, Dec. 14 (AP)—The execution of Morris Leland, 22, for the slaying of a Portland high school girl has been set back from January 6 to January 20.

Circuit Judge James Crawford granted the stay at the request of Leland's attorneys. They want to study a trial transcript before filing a motion for a new trial. Leland was convicted of murdering 15-year-old Thelma Taylor.
