What's in a Name? Death This Time

KHARTOUM, Sudan, (AP)—Two Sudanese who had the same last name—Khamis—were introduced. They cheerfully discussed the coincidence. Then one discovered that the other spelled his name differently in Arabic.

A quarrel over the correct spelling started.

Khamis killed Khamis. Fried ants, eaten by some people in South Africa, are said to have a high vitamin content.

How America's first service station was born

One day back in 1907, a Standard of California man stood watching a line of impatient motorists in goggles and linen dusters waiting to buy five-gallon cans of gasoline at Standard's Seattle plant. He had an idea for serving customers more efficiently, more conveniently.

The next day a thirty-gallon tank which had been a kitchen water heater was installed opposite the main gate at the plant. To it were attached a valve-controlled hose and a glass gauge... so gas could be poured directly into the customers' cars.

That makeshift arrangement was the first service station in America. Today there are more than 10,000 Company and Independent Dealer stations selling Standard of California products. The services and conveniences they offer... the improved products they sell... would probably make them hard to recognize by the men who developed the first station. For the people of Standard today, as then, continue to seek ways to make better products—and to serve better the people who use them.
