

"It's A Woman's World"

IT'S THE BUSY WOMAN who gets things done. Here women captains for part of the south suburban area, aiding the community chest drive admires a trophy won by the Four-H "Sew and Save" club taught by Mrs. Charles Thurman, (center) who also is chairman for the Altamont home extension unit and an ardent gardener and member of the Evergreen garden club. Left to right the captains are Mrs. G. B. Leach, Mrs. L. L. Renn, Mrs. Thurman, Mrs. Walter Hanson and Mrs. Robert Longueville, all active in other community groups. Quota for their area is $275.

Women Workers Walk Many a Weary Mile

Woman's work is never done. If it isn't dishes—it's kids. If it isn't kids, it's PTA and somebody coming for dinner. Shelves to clean, floors to mop, hems to let down and jeans to patch.

But in all this rush and bustle of living, keeping a house clean and organized, groceries ordered and the vain but valiant attempt to balance the budget—woman have time to trudge miles and miles because they are sincerely interested in youth.

This is evident in the work being done by the several hundred volunteer workers on the Klamath County Community Chest which has a terrific goal of $77,370 to handle seven local agencies and 14 state agencies including the very important United Defense Fund.

Because a number of people have repeated that they still don't know what agencies the chest serves, and all this, mind you, when the list has been published over and over, we'll do it again.

The local agencies are, Boy Scouts of America, Camp Fire Girls of America, Chiloquin Teen-Age center, Girl Scouts of America, Merrill Recreation center, The Salvation Army and YMCA.

State agencies are, Albertina Kerr Homes, Boys and Girls aid society, Catholic Charities, Children's Farm Home, Christie Home for Girls, Mental Health Association, Oregon Prison association, Our Lady of Providence nursery, St. Mary's Home for Boys, St. Rose Industrial School, Salvation Army's White Shield home, United Defense Fund, (you remember it as the old USO and every bit as important) Volunteers of America, and the Waverly Baby home.

And if you can look one of these in the face, and not give, you're not the American we think you are. Anyway, that's the attitude of the workers who are ringing bells and knocking on doors this week.

Every worker in the city residential district, co-chaired by Mrs. Lowell Kaup and Mrs. Verne Speirs, is a housewife and probably as busy a bunch of mothers as you'll find anywhere in Mrs. Charles Thurman's section, No. 11, which takes in a whole of a big territory and in some instances, it's been rugged. Here are the names of the women to whom we are tipping our red feathered cap:

Women's Dress Judgment Frequently Sadly Lacking

By DOROTHY ROE

AP Fashion Editor

Few women, French, American, or Hottentot, know how to look their best.

This is the observation of Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli, after a lifetime of selling glamor to most of the world's best-dressed women.

Looking youthful and full of bounce, Mme. Schiaparelli sat at a Louis XIV desk in her black and gilt Fifth avenue salon.

Small, dark and dynamic, she is well qualified to speak on the subject of fashion. Her dressmaking salon in Paris still is flourishing, after 25 years which have seen many of the great names fade. Her enterprises on both sides of the Atlantic multiply almost by the hour. Right now, in addition to her main business of dress designing, she has the following irons in the U.S. fire:

A line of Schiaparelli colls, a stocking manufacturing business, a successful perfume business, a wholesale coat-and-suit manufacturing business, a line of scarfs designed by Schiaparelli, Schiaparelli-designed blouses, and lingerie.

WISTFUL

U.S. tycoons look at her far-flung activities and murmur wistfully.

"But women aren't supposed to understand business."

So Mme. Schiaparelli probably knows what she is talking about when she comments on the vanities of her less-gifted sisters. She adds thoughtfully:

"Few women even know what type they are."

She describes a typical customer in her Paris salon:

"A woman comes in to buy a dress, looks at the model and says 'I love it.' But she'd like it in another color and a different fabric, with perhaps another belt. The result is that when it is completed to her specifications, she hates the dress—and often she's right."

Then there's the customer who buys a dress at one place, a hat at another, accessories somewhere else and then wonders why her clothes always look thrown together."

Unless you are very sure of your own type and tastes, it's best to put yourself in the hands of the designer, whose business it is to see that you look your best, Schiaparelli advises.

GOAL

The essence of the Schiaparelli

philosophy of dress is to avoid distortion of the human figure and to keep the entire picture simple, so that the woman is not secondary to her clothes.

Here on a flying visit to New York, Schiaparelli's most violent fashion comment is on the billowing skirts that are top favorites of the season in the USA, Says she:

"They make even a pretty woman look dowdy. They hide the natural lines of the body. They make thin women look fat, and fat women look enormous. I can't bear to look at another full skirt."

"They remind me of the 'new look', which was the quickest fashion to die in history. Anything that hides the human body to that extent is bad."
