Dramas Are Fine but Ann Blyth Seeks Musical Role

By ERSKINE JOHNSON
HOLLYWOOD, (NEA)—Ann Blyth, who has the gammas and curves for it, has slipped the lead to her studio bosses and agents that she'd like a whack at a typical Betty Grable musical frolic. Scanty costumes, singing, dancing and all.

Getting ready for the heavy histrionics with Gregory Peck in "The World in His Arms," Ann confided dramatic chances. But I keep hinting for musicals. I've kept up my vocal lessons and I could brush up on my dancing with a little practice.

Edgar Bergen's burning over the army's cancellation of his three-week tour of camps. His radio sponsor was ready to pick up the check for the entire junket, but at the last minute, army brass decided they might be criticized because of the commercial tie-up.

Ella Raines has made a New Year's Day reservation at a New York hospital for the stork's landing. It's their first for Col. and Mrs. Robin Olds. No truth to those Peggy Lee-Dave Barbour reconciliation stories. David Niven's first novel, "Once Over Lightly," hits the stands Nov. 12.

Maybe Hollywood's "live" invasion of the hinterlands to hypo "Movietime U.S.A." wasn't such a good idea after all.

The meet-the-people tours, dreamed up by the exhibitors, have brought a fine reaction to the movie contingents in some cities and horrible public relations in others.

The pelting of Dorothy ("I just forgot to duck") Lamour, Director Alfred Hitchcock and Debra Paget with limes at Brockton, Mass., the crowd objected to an hour and half delay in getting the program under way and a plea for "no autographs"—was a sour note Hollywood could ill afford.

Preview Note: Paramounts "Deductive Story," produced and directed by William Wyler, is slick, adult celluloid with three really great performances by Kirk Douglas, Eleanor Parker and Lee Grant in the featured role of a shoplifter.

Television's sagebrush heroes can start blushing over MGM's "Callaway Went Thataway," a satire on video cowboy heroes. Howard Keel plays a cowboy who's taken right off the range to become a national hero.

"But I never did any acting," he protests to Fred MacMurray, a Hollywood agent.

"Who said anything about acting?" replies Fred. "You're going to be a cowboy star. All you need are two expressions—hat on and hat off."

Stan Laurel is back to 140 pounds and is anxious to resume his career. He never expected to leave that Paris hospital alive.

John Howard and Rochelle Hudson are teaming up for a TV film series, "Ship From Macaboo." Rhonda Fleming's penciled in for Cleopatra in Columbia's "Serpent of the Nile."

Ann Sheridan's chuckling over the memories brought back by a TV revival of "Winter Carnival," a movie she made at the peak of her "Oomph Girl" publicity. As she tells it:

"Walter Wanger borrowed me from Warner's but he'd have nothing to do with the 'Oomph Girl' ballyhoo. Instead he paid $22,000 for a full-page ad in a national magazine and labeled me 'America's No. 1 woman of allure.'"

"I went back to Warner's and they told me that I'm copy and no one ever mentioned the word 'allure' again!"

Hollywood did a double take when Director Stuart Heisler cast one-armed Donald Gray as Linda Darnell's lover in "Saturday in London." Would audiences accept a physically handicapped hero opposite luscious Linda?

The answer is coming from previews of the film, where Gray's being cheered by audiences. He lost an arm as a soldier in North Africa.

Modern-day movie acting?

Francis X. Bushman, the Clark Gable of his day, didn't mind having his say-so on the subject.

"In the old days, we were individualists. We turned our heads the way we felt it. It was real. I make a gesture today and they tell me that I'm copy and an old-school actor. Old school, my eye. I was reacting naturally."

"Today you have a big scene. A mother dies in an upstairs room. The daughter turns to her boy friend and says 'She's gone.' Then she takes out a cigaret, and says, 'Do you have a light?' Oh, no give me the good old days."

 MOUNT SHASTA—Forest Supvr. Robert E. Jones announced today that all forest service campground on the Shasta national forest will be closed during the winter months. Campgrounds at Shasta lake will be closed December 1 to April 1 and all others on the forest from November 1 to May 1.

Closing of the campgrounds has become necessary during the winter months because of lack of funds and manpower to police and maintain them to standards of proper sanitation and cleanliness.

Smokers Seek Tax Escape
 PORTLAND, (AP)—Smokers are buying cigarets at an increased pace here, apparently trying to stock up before a new tax goes into effect November 1.

A federal tax boost of 1-cent-per-pack will go into effect then.

Store managers said no rush had developed for other items on which taxes will go up at the same time.

Mrs. Rosenberg Finds GIs Without Any Major Gripes

EASTERN FRONT, Korea, (AP)—Mrs. Anna Rosenberg sat on a rice paddy dike near Heartbreak ridge Thursday and got the GI word on conditions in Korea.

"Never have I seen anything like it," said Mrs. Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense. "I talked to each of these (20) men and did not receive one single gripe from any of them about the combat condition over here.

"Without exception, each man in the division to whom I talked said the food is good, mail service is good and they are getting plenty of winter clothing."

Accompanied by Gen. James A. Van Fleet, eighth army commander, Mrs. Rosenberg arrived at a forward airstrip in a light plane. She wore Web slacks and an Eisenhower jacket.

Within a few minutes she had cornered 20 battle-hardened enlisted men, lead them away from the officers and invited: "Let's count and talk it over, fellows." The rumble of artillery fire punctuated their conversation.

"What about GI benefits and school after we are released?" asked Pfc. John Whittemore, Pasadena, Calif.

"They are the same now as world war two veterans enjoyed," she replied. "There also will be loans for some individuals who desire to go into a small business."

"Anything new on rotation?" popped Whittemore. It was a query that was foremost in everyone's mind. Mrs. Rosenberg answered: "We are doing the best we can. Rotation is going fine. If and when the backlog ever catches up, the point system will be lowered."

A rousing cheer greeted Mrs.

Hunters' Safety Program Sponsord by Moose Lodge

The proper handling of firearms and caution in hunting will be the topics headlining a sportsman's educational meeting Sunday at the Moose rifle range.

The program is slated principally toward youngsters just starting out to hunt, but adults are also urged to attend the meet, according to chairman Vic Douglas.

Sgt. E. W. Tichener and Dal Reed of the Oregon state police will be on hand to speak on caution in handling rifles. Jim Savage, federal game enforcement officer, will speak on various types of birds in the basin and pass along tips on shotgunning. Sheriff Jack Franey will talk on what to do in case of an accident and Buster Gordon, suburban fire chief, will speak on methods of fire protection. A public address system will be furnished by George Connors.

All who are interested are urged to attend the meeting which will be held at the Moose rifle range at the end of Eberlein street, between 10 and one o'clock. Bring along your rifles and shotguns, says Douglas. Targets will be available for riflemen and trap shooting equipment will be in use.
