"Walkin' and Whistlin' the Blues." This song title fits a situation peculiar to many of us today, which is report card day. Honor roll results were compiled this afternoon after classes with Miss Orpha Hudson and will be published tomorrow.

This week, as the first week of the second nine-week term, we will begin our classes and studies with a clean slate and begin working for our next term's grades.

A good grade average is important to everyone, in fact, many clubs require a certain grade average in order to maintain membership.

A student body meeting is on the agenda for tomorrow's activity period. The students will have a chance at that time to nominate prospective candidates for first vice-president from the floor.

Nomination blanks must be secured from the office before the meeting and be signed by the nominee and the one who nominates him. This regulation relieves confusion during the meetings and no candidates are nominated unless they wish to run for the office, thus reducing the number of those who decline.

The school is sponsoring and sending the pep peppers and marching band to the Bend game, as they are marching for the halftime show. They will probably go on a school bus. The girls are asked to sign up immediately with Miss Baille, pep pepper advisor.

Working on drills and formations for the game, which will be Monday afternoon at Bend, the band and pep peppers have practiced everyday this week.

The band will do a series of precision drill routines and while they form a circle the pep peppers will form a K and B in the center.

The script and mike held a short discussion meeting this morning. The main purpose was to look over the list of prospective new members. They also discussed publicity for their Pelicana and sports albums programs.

The club officers are Sam Montgomery, president, Lyn Perkins, vice-president Margaret Powell, secretary and Tom Murdock, treas.

Grandfather in for Shock When Mitzi Plays Tanguay

HOLLYWOOD (NEA)—Guys and Dolls:

Wait until grandpop gets a look at Mitzi Gaynor as Eva Tanguay in "The I Don't Care Girl."

His eyes may have popped when Eva snapped her fingers and walked on the stage in silken tights, but Mitzi's costumes will paralyze the old boy.

"I'm slightly scantier than Eva," confessed Mitzi. "In Eva's day, she wore what they called tennis shorts and husbands left their wives when they saw her. If I wore anything like that, I'd get a yawn."

Any resemblance to Eva will be strictly accidental, Mitzi whispered, "because they gave me one old and dark still-picture of her and all I could see was an arm and a leg. What can I do with an arm and a leg? I just have to use my imagination."

Luther Adler's making his racket-boss role in "The Hoodlum Empire" a real flesh-and-blood character on the theory that gangsters don't walk around looking stony-faced.

Claims Adler:

"Cagney, Robinson, Muni, even George Raft when he did 'Scarface,' never played gangsters the hard-faced way. That school of acting came in with Alan Ladd and Laurence Tierney.

"Now we know that gangsters have expressive faces and that is the way I'm playing this character."

"I had five ulcers before they let me play Jeff Chandler's Indian wife in "The Battle of Apache Pass.' They said Jeff was too tall for me. I went running from office to office pedticking for the part. I reminded them that Hedda Hayes had played with Gary Cooper in "Farewell to Arms' and that the picture was one of Hollywood's greatest love stories."

Dark-eyed Susan Cabot, who hits the height-measuring stick at two inches over 5 feet, paused to catch her breath.

Now that she's licked the height problem at UI, Susan wants to battle against playing "dark, exotic little things."

"I'm either in jungles or gypsy wagons," Susan wailed. "I don't know why. My coloring is exactly like Elizabeth Taylor's. Do they put her in a sarong? No."

It's a new career shake for Anthony Quinn, suddenly red-hot as an actor in "Zapata" and "The World In His Arms," and he is wondering what all the shouting's about.

"Maybe it's the TV shows I did in New York," he grinned. "I did so many they started calling me the TV man. I'm nuts about television.

"I have a feeling that I can contribute more to Hollywood as an actor if I live in New York. I get a better perspective on things. The town revitalizes me.

If Greer Garson can live in Texas and still be a movie queen, then Peggy Dow can fight down in Tulsa, Okla., and still wear her celluloid crown as Mrs. Walter Helmerich.

"People keep saying that my career will go when I marry Walter and live away from Hollywood," Peggy confided. "I don't think so. I've talked the whole thing over with the studio. I'm not going to give them any trouble.

"But at the same time I don't intend to have Walter to follow me around because I'm an actress. I'm going to follow him around."

Charles Block, who heads a photographic syndicate in Hollywood reported to the home of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. early one morning with a staff of photographers to do a home-layout on the star.

They were met at the door by a man whom they assumed was Fairbanks' butler from his polite manner and strong British accent.

Then he showed them over the Fairbanks' manse, suggesting corners and spots that might be interesting as photographic backgrounds.

"You've certainly been helpful," Block told him. "In fact, I want to tell Mr. Fairbanks how helpful you've been. I might get you a raise or something. What is your name by the way?"

"Anthony Eden," came the reply.

The search for a vehicle that will put peppy Estelita Rodriguez into the Lupe Velez acting league is ended at Republic and she will star with Rod Cameron in "Fair Wind to Java."

"Theengs are popping out for me," Estelita bubbled. "I don't like theese tak'-eet-easy stoff. Theese comedies I am making ees good for me. Ees better than to go 'boing' right away eento beeg peec tures. Mak' me feel lak I worked for beeg theengs."

Bank Features New Displays

Customers entering the Klamath Falls, S. 6th and Merrill branches of the First National bank of Portland on the morning of November 1 were greeted with striking proof that banking in Oregon has come a long way from the days of marble pillars and rigid formality.

In conjunction with First National's statewide "safety first" campaign to make Oregonians more safe deposit conscious, all the offices in the First National group are featuring colorful three dimensional floor displays, lobby cards, counter cards, descriptive folders, and large buttons reading "ask me" worn by each employe. The color and attention value of the display material combine to give the banks lobbies a striking appearance and give evidence that banking has gone modern.

Use of up-to-date point of sale merchandising techniques is a procedure comparatively new to the banking field, according to Klamath Falls Branch Mgr. R. H. Tisdale. Similar concentrated merchandising programs are being held currently in all 64 offices in the first National bank group, consisting of the First National bank of Portland and its 45 statewide banking offices and 15 affiliated banks with 18 offices.

'Just Fiddling Life Away'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"He said he wanted to take care of me," the actress testified, "but he never did. He's a violinist."

"In other words," said superior Judge George Dockweiler, "he's just fiddling his life away, is that it?"

The actress, one of the Wilde twins who married the Cathcart brothers, nodded yes. Lyn Wilde, 26, won a divorce Monday on the grounds of cruelty from James Cathcart, orchestra leader. They were married nine years ago.
