Lumber Work Figure Down

Approximately one-third of the basin lumbering and logging labor force has been laid off because of winter weather, the Klamath Falls employment office announced today. However, the unemployment, though following the usual seasonal pattern, has been a little longer this year because of the early winter.

The lumbering industry has shown a steady decline since 1940 in the number of persons employed the office reported.

In 1940 the industry employed 6410 persons; in 1951, 3265 persons were employed in lumbering, logging and manufacture of lumber products.

The phase has leveled off, though. The 1947 payroll (second quarter) was $3,551,824; the same period last year payroll was $3,520,448.

The agricultural industry the office reports, has upheld the level of economy in the basin.

In 1949, 8623 persons were employed in that industry with a payroll of $6,611,538; in 1950 8950 persons were employed with a payroll of $6,636,551; in 1951 8626 persons were employed with a payroll of $7,280,873.

Stream Year Figure Gains

Only three and a half months of the present stream year have passed, but so far there has been more than nine inches of precipitation in Klamath Falls, according to figures released by the Bureau of Reclamation.

As of midnight last night, 9.12 inches of rain and water content of snow had fallen on Klamath Falls.

Last year at this time 8.71 inches of precipitation had been recorded, and that was a near record year for rainfall up to that time.

Normal for the period is 5.34, with the stream year beginning on Oct. 1.

In Alturas total precip has been registered by Modoc National Forest headquarters through December, at 4.35 inches.

Five year average for the period is 4.30 inches.

Last month alone precip measured 3 inches; but the same month in 1937 saw 5.65 inches of precipitation, according to Forest Service Records.

Alturas recorded its low temperature for the season on Jan. 1-2-3 when thermometers dropped to 8 degrees below zero.

Mate Tells Of Ship Breakup

NEW YORK (AP)—Fank L. Bartak, 32, chief mate of the ill-fated freighter Flying Enterprise, testified Thursday that the ship suffered four cracks, before it began listing in heavy seas.

Bartak, of Bedford, Ohio, testified at a Coast Guard inquiry seeking to determine the causes leading to the loss of the Ibrantsen Company's 6,711-ton vessel.

Bartak said four cracks, between one-eighth and one-fourth of an inch wide, appeared on the starboard and port sides near the No. 3 cargo hatch.
