

MOTHER CHARGED WITH MURDER — Mrs. Jada Z. Kader, 21, Portland, was charged with first degree murder in the death of her daughter, Sherrie Ellen, 3. The charge was filed after another daughter, Vickie, 4, told detectives her mother had dropped Sherrie in a drainage pit. Mrs. Kader first reported the child had been kidnaped.

Lois Rumer—Principal at Henley elementary school reported that they are having a contest between the grades at Henley on the March of Dimes. That so far there has been $169 turned in, the contest closing January 31. At the present time the sixth grade, Frank Hales room, is leading with $30 turned in; the third grade, Margaret Westlin's room, is second with $22.50 and Margaret Davies fifth grade is close behind with $22.00.

mitted immediately how many casualties there were.
Why is that significant?
Well it goes quite a way toward explaining why the British are so deeply hated throughout the Old World area where their colonial empire once flourished. They've been TOO EXCLUSIVE. Never have they mixed on equal terms with the peoples they ruled.
Practically always, they have held themselves apart — in "exclusive clubs," for example, where only the British could enter.

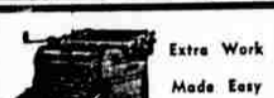

Imagine yourself an Egyptian. Suppose that in your town or your city there was an "exclusive" social club where the British were welcome BUT YOU WEREN'T ALLOWED. Suppose that had been going on for generation after generation.
You'd be hot under the collar, wouldn't you?
Of course you would. You'd be not only angry. You'd be bitter and intolerant.

Suppose you were an Iranian. You'd feel the same way about it. Even if your scheme to "nationalize" your oil (taking it away from the British owners in the nationalizing process) didn't work out and you were far worse off economically than before you seized the foreigners' oil you'd still be so angry you wouldn't care what happened so long as you had the satisfaction of taking the oil away from the British.

Drama Group Will Meet

The Drama Musical Arts Council will meet Thursday, January 31 in the YMCA Bldg. at 8:00 p.m. Dr. Robert Wood, chairman for the group has announced that try-outs will be held at this meeting for a two-act mystery-comedy entitled "A Scream in the Dark," which will be presented free to the children of the Klamath Basin sometime in March, as part of the program of the Klamath Musical Arts Council to encourage the use of local talent in music and arts. Anyone interested in any phase of amateur theatricals is cordially invited to attend the meeting.
The Council will soon present to the radio public a series of radio programs making use not only of its various music and art groups but sponsoring other such groups of local talent throughout the Basin.

If we're going to run the world—a task to which we seem to have been committed, willy-nilly—we'd better learn from the British mistakes. If we're going to run other people's affairs for them, we'd better BE GOOD MIXERS.
Otherwise, we'll get into the same BAD trouble the British have got into.

Skiers Pose Problem For Safety Engineers; Now They Plan For More Care

By JOHN KAMPS
WASHINGTON — Skiers are taking to the hills in increasing numbers, so authorities are looking for ways to protect them from snow avalanches.
Skiers are a hardy lot. They break their legs, then head for the mountains again as soon as they mend. But there isn't much they can do when they face a moving mountain of snow which can kill everything in its path.
Since an estimated two million skiers are using, or plan to use, winter sports areas in national forests this winter, the U.S. Forest Service is taking the lead in avalanche control work.
The Forest Service has received requests from private, state and other federal agencies for help in combating the threat, which faces motorists in mountain states as well as skiers.
Through training schools, the forest service has made some progress in developing techniques for forecasting avalanche hazard. Observation stations have been set up to record climatic factors influencing the occurrence of snowslides. They are at Heather Meadows, Wash., Berthoud Pass, Colo., and Alta, Utah.
Explosives have been used to make dangerous slopes—where snowbanks frequently are 12 to 15 feet deep—safe for the skiers. Artillery shells have been fired into the snow to release snowslides artificially when the path below was clear.
The Utah National Guard has made a 75-millimeter cannon and crew available at Alta for call on short notice.
John Herbert of the Forest Service will bring back some information on how the Swiss fight avalanches when he returns in March from Europe, where he is with the U.S. Olympic ski team.
The assistant chief of the Forest Service's recreation division will attend a two-week avalanche institute next month in Switzerland, where avalanches kill skiers almost annually.

He is expected to confer with experts in Norway and Austria while in those countries with the ski team, which he manages.
The Forest Service began regarding avalanches as a major problem when, in recent years, the number of skiers using national forests began increasing rapidly.
Many of the nation's major ski areas are in national forests.
Skiers last winter made 161,300 visits to the Government Camp-Timberline area in the Mt. Hood Forest of Oregon.
Figures for other western areas (with area, forest and visits) include:
Idaho-Bald Mountain (Sun Valley), Sawtooth, 70,000; Lookout Pass, Coeur D'Alene, 10,000.
Oregon-Tollgate, Umatilla, 24,000.
Washington—Snoqualmie Pass, Snoqualmie, 60,300; Stevens Pass, Wenatchee, 47,000; Ski Acres, Wenatchee, 37,800; Heather Meadows, Mt. Baker, 30,800.
