George VI Asleep As Life Ends

king to visit the United States—he was there with his Queen, Elizabeth, in 1939. The new queen went to Washington last year on a side-trip from her trip across Canada.

Prime Minister Churchill called an emergency meeting of the Cabinet to set in motion the machinery which will lead to Elizabeth's formal taking of the throne.

One of her first duties will be to set a period of mourning for the court. When her grandfather, George V, died, court mourning was ordered for nine months.

George V's queen, Mary, at 84 has outlived both her husband and her son.

It was at Sandringham that George V died Jan. 21, 1936. Then Edward VIII was king for a few months. The dead king at that time was Duke of York. He became King Dec. 11, 1936, when Edward gave up the throne for "the woman I love," the twice-divorced Mrs. Simpson.

The House of Commons and Lords met briefly then adjourned. Each member must take an oath of allegiance to the new queen.

On her 21st birthday, she dedicated her life to looking after the welfare of that empire.

In a radio speech from Capetown, South Africa, where she and her parents were making another commonwealth tour, she said:

"I declare before you all that my whole life, whether it be long or short, shall be devoted to your service and the service of our great imperial family to which we all belong."

Two events had changed her life from that of a playful daughter of the Duke of York.

Her mother's decision of her uncle, Edward VIII, to quit the throne so he could marry an American, Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, who was unacceptable to the Church of England because she had been married twice previously.

His abdication made her father king on Dec. 11, 1936, and made her the heiress apparent to the throne.

Her mother and father had tried to bring her up as a normal child, and even wanted to send her to schools where she could mingle with other children her own age.

But a family council, presided over by King George V, her grandfather—who she called "Grandpa England"—firmly vetoed the idea.

Her grandmother, a firm guardian of Victorian ideals, was also insistent that Elizabeth, by being anywhere in the line of succession, needed a special education to fill her place close to the throne.

She hired a woman governess, Miss Marion Crawford, an honor graduate of Edinburgh University, as her tutor.

Later one of Britain's leading historians, Clarence Henry Kennett Martin, plied her with history.

Her education leaned heavily toward reminders of her future responsibility and stiff training in economic of a nation that lives by trade with a huge empire.

At Cedar Pass the snow measured 16 inches with water content of 21 inches.

Precipitation during the month of January brought the season's total at Alturas to 9.10 inches, considerably above the five-year average of 5.4 inches, as recorded by the Forest Service. Lowest temperature during January at Alturas was 16 degrees below zero on Jan. 18.

2 Dismissed In Grain Case

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary Brannan Wednesday fired the director and assistant director of the Agriculture Department's commodity office at Dallas, in connection with current investigations of shortages of government grain.

The discharges of Director Lathan White and Assistant Director James Solomon, become effective at the close of business Friday.

They have been off duty since late in December, pending a department investigation.

A department spokesman said the men were removed from their jobs for "administrative deficiencies and inadequacies."

It was in the Dallas area that several commercial storage concerns had been charged with converting government grain to their own use, mainly for speculative purposes.

Brannan took his action after studying answers White and Solomon had made to charges against them.
